CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Adjustment of misunderstandings and differences which delayed expected settlement of the railway shopmen's strike on some of the roads favorable to the Baltimore peace arrangements was apparent today.

There is rising hope that Bert M. Jewell, the shopmen's leader, would iron out with officers of the New York Central lines differences which prevented an agreement between striking shopmen and the roads which form that system.

These hopes were strengthened when the Southern Railway, the Mobile & Ohio, controlled by the Southern, and the Monon, fell in line with roads accepting the Baltimore plan and signed the agreement. Many strikers on these roads are expected back today at the jobs they left July 1.

Reports of a general return to work by striking shopmen on roads which agreed to the Baltimore plan, brought predictions by union leaders that the estimated number of 50,000 returned strikers on various roads would be doubled within a few days. Shop forces generally are estimated in railroad circles today at about 45 per cent of normal. The estimate is based both on the number of returned strikers and on reports from roads which held aloof from the Baltimore terms and all mediators' negotiations with the striking shopmen's organizations, and recruited their forces independently. New shop unions were formed on some of these roads.

The association of Rock Island shop employees is being formed by employees now in the service of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad, according to J. E. Gorman, president of the road. Former employees now on strike will be given an opportunity until Oct. 1 to re-enter the service with pass and pension privileges, Gorman said, asserting that returned strikers will not be restored to their old positions on the seniority lists.

Roads which turned down the Baltimore terms asserted that Jewell was chiefly occupied now in efforts to get jobs for men he called out July 1.

Erstwhile strikers who returned to work under the settlement terms did so without any signs of disorder such as those last Saturday when the returning union men demanded the dismissal of nonunion employees and the restoration of "bosses' jobs to former union foremen."

Strike Leaders Continue Court Assault on Daugherty's Bill.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—With more than one-third of the Government's evidence in its injunction suit against striking railway shopmen ruled out by Federal Judge Wilkerson, attorneys for Bert M. Jewell and John Scott, strike leaders, continued their assault on Attorney-General Daugherty's bill today.

In throwing out of court 283 affidavits recounting violence in connection with the strike, Judge Wilkerson sustained the contention of Donald R. Richberg and Frank Mulholland, defense counsel, that the persons making the affidavits did not know they were to be used in court.

There was a possibility early today that some of the banished affidavits would be resworn and resubmitted in evidence.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE MADE IN CAHILL CASE

Five East St. Louis Youths Named After Coroner's Investigation of Fight.

A charge of manslaughter was placed against five East St. Louis youths yesterday, after a Coroner's jury returned a verdict that Raymond Cahill, 26 years old, of 1731 Kansas avenue, died Friday night from injuries suffered in an unlawful attack upon him by the youths, not with murderous intent.

The men charged are: Julius Scheich, 21, of 1614 Henrietta avenue; Frank Rukavina, 19, of Center-ville Station; Zelmar Moore, 20, of 119 North Second street; Marcus Gambelin, 18, of 1406 Kansas avenue; and Frank Kiersch, 17, of 25 North Fourteenth street.

All except Gambelin testified at the inquest. Cahill was employed as a glass-blower at the plant of the Clear-Nester Glass Co., where Katie Adams, nee, 20, of 1411 Kansas avenue, also is employed. They worked until 11 p. m. Friday, and on their way home from work sat on a wooden sill of the Irving school at Fifteenth street and Division avenue.

Picked Up a Shirt.
The five youths passed through the school yard, saw them, and went to ascertain who they were. The girl had a bundle containing a shirt, cap and apron, her working clothes. One of the youths picked up the shirt and said: "Here's the girl's bloomers." Cahill replied that the garment was his shirt, and asked that it be left alone.

The youth asked Cahill if he thought he wanted to steal the garment. Cahill replied that he didn't know, but anyway the garment was his property and the youth had no business to meddle with it. Cahill and the girl walked to the sidewalk, when Scheich struck him, according to the testimony of Scheich. He said that Cahill then ran, and that Rukavina went after him, and struck him. He said he did not know how often Rukavina struck Cahill, but he became unconscious and died while being taken to a hospital.

Rukavina Makes Denial.
Rukavina denied striking Cahill. He said he and Moore ran after the girl, and when he came back Scheich had his arms about Cahill, who was unconscious and bleeding from a cut on the forehead. The others testified that they did not see the blows struck, as they were chasing the girl.

The latter testified that the youths chased her, and that she ran home. She said that they acted as though they had been drinking, and they stated at the inquest that they had drunk some "white mule," which they purchased in a saloon.

Cahill died from a fracture of the skull, believed to have been suffered when he was knocked down on the brick-paved street.

FUND FOR HOSPITAL PLANNED

Plans for a financial campaign for the Children's Hospital, 500 South King's highway, will be discussed by the board of managers at Hotel Statler, at 1 p. m. next Tuesday. The fund will be raised to build additions and eliminate a deficit.

The proposed additions call for four more floors on the Mary E. Culver Building, two for the University Pavilion and one for the Elizabeth Liggett Building. The additions will make the buildings of a uniform height of six floors. The hospital specializes in the care of children, a majority being free or part pay patients.

SECOND EDITOR ARRESTED ON INJUNCTION CONTEMPT CHARGE

Action by Government Follows Publication of Article in Memphis Afternoon Newspaper.

By the Associated Press.
MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 18.—G. V. Sanders, managing editor of the Memphis Press, an afternoon paper, was arrested last night on a Federal warrant charging contempt of court. The charge grows out of the publication of an article printed following the arrest of Jacob Cohen, editor of the Labor Review, on a similar charge, based on an article in the latter paper. The article was charged by the Government to be a violation of the Federal injunction granted to the San Francisco & St. Louis and Illinois Central railroads a few weeks ago.

Cohen yesterday was fined $1000 and sentenced to six months in jail. He was released on executing an appeal bond of $1000.

Sanders, released upon his own recognizance, will appear in court next Saturday. The press is a member of a chain of newspapers owned by a corporation. Sanders recently assumed the managing editorship, coming from the paper owned by the corporation at Houston, Tex. He is the second editor of the paper here to become involved in contempt proceedings. Edward Leach, a former editor, having served a 10-day sentence for contempt of the chancery court a few days ago.

MAN STABBED IN FIGHT DIES

Altercation Grew Out of Argument Over Rail Shop Strike.
James Waters, 35 years old, a switchman, of 1313 Lafin street, died yesterday at Mullanphy Hospital from a stab wound in the abdomen inflicted in a general fight between railroad shop strike sympathizers and two employees of the Missouri Pacific Railroad at Grand boulevard and Market street last Friday.

Waters would tell police nothing of the fight, after they learned he had been left at the hospital by companions. Guy Granger, 50, of 4719 Newcomb place, a Missouri Pacific mechanic who suffered a fracture of the nose in the fight, told police he did not do the stabbing nor did he believe his companion, G. W. Holler, 47, another mechanic, used a knife. Holler is at the city hospital suffering from a fractured skull and scalp wounds.

COMBING WON'T RID HAIR OF DANDRUFF

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

MINERS REFUSE TO AID GRAND JURY IN HERRIN INQUIRY

Evidence Sought Concerning Killing of Three Union Workers Day Before Massacre of 19 Nonunion Men.

INDICTMENTS IN THIS PHASE UNLIKELY
Jury Obtains Some Information on Matter, but Not Sufficient to Justify Specific Charges.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MARION, Ill., Sept. 19.—The mine workers' organization of Illinois, which is giving legal and financial assistance to its members who have been indicted for the Herrin massacre, will not proffer to the Williamson County grand jury evidence concerning the killing of three union miners on June 21, the day before the 19 nonunion men were killed.

A. C. Lewis, one of the attorneys for the United Mine Workers, made this statement today following the announcement of Assistant Attorney-General Middlekauff that the jury will take up this week the killing of the three union men.

It is understood that, although the jury has obtained some information about the killing of these men, it is not sufficiently explicit to justify an expectation of indictments, and a request will be made for anybody having information to submit it to the jury.

Complaint of Miners.
The miners and their friends have shown a disposition to complain that the inquiry is centered upon the killing of the 19 men on June 22, to the exclusion of the killing of three the day before.

This has been denied by Attorney-General Brundage and when grand jury took a recess on Sept. 7, Foreman John Sorensen, taking cognizance of the criticism, issued a statement that "We will investigate the deaths of union coal miners in the same thorough manner that we are now investigating the deaths of nonunion men."

When Lewis was asked if he and his associates would offer the grand jury any evidence on the killing of the nonunion men he said, "We will not. We announced at the beginning that we would take no hand in the investigation and we adhere to that pledge. If the grand jury wants evidence on the killing of the union miners it can subpoena witnesses as it has done in investigating the other killings. Our only purpose in this matter is to defend innocent men."

Statement of Union Executive.
Hugh Willis, a member of the State Executive Committee of the United Mine Workers, said: "It is known that there were armed men at the strip mine and that our men were killed by shots fired from the mine. The grand jury knows witnesses who can testify to these facts. The evidence taken at the inquest also is available."

At the inquest conducted by Coroner McCown, a verdict was rendered that one of the union miners was killed by Supt. McDowell of the mine. This was on the strength of testimony of one of the mine employees that McDowell fired a shot at a man and he fell.

Willis complained that the newspapers had emphasized the fact that one of the massacre victims was an ex-service man, while ignoring the service records of the union men. Two of the union men who were killed were former service men, he said, and Otis Clark, the first union miner indicted for murder, is a Spanish war veteran drawing a pension of $30 a month. Clark, who was suffering with tuberculosis when locked up, is still in a separate cell and is under the care of a physician.

Prisoners Well Cared For.
Clark and the other 26 men held here, of the 38 indicted for murder, are well fed and cared for by the miners' organization and are treating their detention as a temporary inconvenience, which they are bearing with fortitude and giving themselves up to the playfulness which is engendered when numbers are in the same dilemma.

"They are the most jovial bunch you ever saw," said Willis. Although all but four of the men in jail have families, they do not have to worry about the welfare of their dependents. The families are being looked after by the State organization of miners. Willis said, Relief is being given to each family according to its circumstances.

The belief that there will be no convictions is shared by a good many besides the miners. Those who think the nonunion men "got what was coming to them" view the grand jury investigation as a formality which must be borne, in deference to the sentiment of the State and country. Those who approve of the inquiry and think there should be convictions have little hope that there will be any. Both point out that a hand-picked grand jury composed mostly of farmers, is one thing, and a petit jury drawn by chance and only partially safeguarded by the right of challenge, are two very different things.

Defense Busy on Alibis.
Such confidence as exists that convictions will be obtained rests on the knowledge that much of the evidence obtained by the grand jury is direct and positive. But this evidence is subject to the vicissitudes of memory of witnesses when they take the stand in open court. And then there are the alibis which it is expected will be supplied by the defense in impressive array. It is suggested that a jury not eager to convict will be able to find excuse for acquittal in the uncertainties created by alibi testimony.

It is known that the defense is busily building up its alibis and it is expected that there will be witnesses to testify that all of the accused were far from the scene of the massacre.

Applications have been filed for bond for all the men accused of murder. The next step will be for Judge Hartwell to set a time for a hearing. He suggested a hearing last week, but the attorneys were unable to agree on a date.

Bonds will be opposed by the State on the ground that the evidence is direct and the presumption of guilt is great and the accused men are therefore not entitled to bail.

Missouri Pacific Restores Train.

The Missouri Pacific today restored its afternoon passenger train to Kansas City, leaving St. Louis at 2:02 p. m. and arriving in Kansas City at 9:30, and its day train from Kansas City to St. Louis, leaving there at 9 a. m. and arriving here at 5:20 p. m. It also restored a local train in each direction between St. Louis and Kansas City. These trains were laid off as emergency measures during the shopmen's strike and the coal shortage.

VARIED ATTRACTIONS AT MILK FUND BENEFIT

Carnival at Vandeventer and Laclede to Continue Throughout the Week.

The carnival which opened at the Show Grounds, Vandeventer and Laclede avenues, Sunday evening for the benefit of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund, will be continued through the week, the weather permitting, and it is hoped that the proceeds of the affair will add considerably to the fund for the babies.

In addition to the five rides and twelve shows of the Siegrist & Sullivan aggregation more than a score of other concessions have pitched their booths and tents on the big lot and are operating for the benefit of the babies. The National Dairy Council is co-operating with Fred E. S. Reno, director of the carnival, and is exhibiting two pens of chickens illustrating the physical difference between those which have been fed a cereal and milk diet and those which have been raised on the cereal ration without the milk. The effect that the lack of milk has caused in the chickens should make every St. Louisan stop and consider the far greater injury which children suffer when denied milk. Not only their physical, but their mental growth, is stunted. It behooves the friends of the babies to rally to the support of the Milk and Ice Fund which has been sadly lagging the last few weeks, in order that the $10,000 budget may be forthcoming and the scope of its work not be seriously cramped.

The Boy Scouts are co-operating splendidly in the carrying on of the carnival. Troop 35 under the direction of Scoutmaster Charles Duggan was on duty Sunday evening and last night Troop 33, of which Walter Winous is scoutmaster, was on the grounds.

The carnival begins each evening at 7 o'clock and continues until at least 11 p. m. The attractions are varied and offer amusement to young and old, and the affair merits the consideration and help of all who are interested in the work for the tenement children.

Isaac Hedger Home From Europe. Isaac Hedger, custodian of the Washington University, Cupples Station property, has returned from a three months' trip to Europe where he toured through France, Switzerland, Holland and Belgium. He was impressed with the calm and efficient manner in which the devastated districts are being rehabilitated. He visited Oxford University, England, and noted the many plates, erected to former students who fell in the war, in the halls of its various colleges.

Health Helps

These suggestions for keeping fit are based on and approved by eminent authorities

A medicine cabinet containing efficient and proven remedies for minor ailments should be in every household. The bathroom is the logical place for it.

We are advising here only certain simple home remedies which have proven beneficial in time of need. In all major requirements, consult your doctor.

Pearly White Teeth—Now!

The proper care of the teeth is considered nowadays of paramount importance to the general health. Brush your teeth daily with Calox. This oxygen tooth powder not only gives you beautiful, gleaming white teeth, but you can feel the germicidal oxygen cleansing and refreshing the entire mouth. Keep your mouth and teeth safe with Calox—the ideal tooth powder that cleans scientifically and safely. Use the big box; it goes three times as far.

Internal Lubrication

All mechanical processes need lubrication in order to function properly. The human intestine acts in a largely mechanical way and yet we often neglect this very important part of the body. Constipation is widespread. The use of McKesson & Robbins Liquid Albolene is recommended in aiding the mechanical function of the intestines. It has no medicinal or drug action and does not stimulate, for it is inert. Changes of climate and living conditions are often accompanied with distressing constipation. Lubricate your intestines just as you lubricate your motor car to keep it in good running order. McKesson & Robbins Liquid Albolene is a pure, tasteless, odorless mineral oil that is tried and true because it has a long record of satisfactory results.

For Emergencies—Milk of Magnesia

A sudden case of indigestion will find you prepared if you have a bottle of McKesson & Robbins Milk of Magnesia in the house. It is really indispensable for it has a hundred uses. Acidity of the mouth and stomach, dyspepsia, indigestion, flatulence, nausea, vomiting and many other ailments are relieved by a tablespoonful or two of McKesson & Robbins Milk of Magnesia mixed with a little water. It is a friend in need when some emergency arises in the middle of the night. It has a pleasant, cooling taste and the color and consistency of good rich milk, with no suggestion of medicine. Children like it. It is not a patent medicine, but a standard preparation, prescribed for years by foremost physicians. Made in the daylight laboratories of McKesson & Robbins, you know it is the best that modern scientific chemistry can produce.

Relief for Local Pains

Muscular pains, neuralgic or rheumatic twinges are relieved by McKesson & Robbins Analgesic Balm. This effective Balm is prepared scientifically to alleviate local pain where there are no raw surfaces. It is especially valuable for muscular fatigue so common among athletes, campers, shoppers, etc. Applied locally with friction, at first a cooling sensation, followed by a feeling of intense but pleasant warmth results. Pain is quickly banished. A splendid preparation for lumbago, gout, neuralgia and rheumatic pains. It is also valuable for toothache and earache or wherever local pain occurs. Be sure to get the genuine bearing the McKesson & Robbins label shown below. Do not depend on an inferior formula. Analgesic Balm is also beneficial for colds and catarrhal affections of the nose and throat. Applied to the outside of the nostrils it aids easy breathing and clears the nasal passage.

"THE AWFUL TRUTH" IS FIRST SMART PLAY

Arthur Richman's Light Comedy Produces Smoothest Performance of Season.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—"The Awful Truth" was produced last night by A. L. Erlanger at Henry Miller's Theater, with Ina Claire in the principal role. It was written by Arthur Richman.

"The Awful Truth" is the first smart play of the new season and by far the smoothest performance seen so far. Owing to our inability to distinguish readily between a good part and a good performance we are a little at a loss to know whether Arthur Richman's comedy is actually as clever as most of it seemed or whether the illusion of wit was produced by the unconsciously deft work of Ina Claire, Bruce McRae and several others. Then again, the direction of Gilbert Miller may have had something to do with it.

Perhaps the safest way will be to split up the credit. We would prefer, however, to reserve most of the honors for Miss Claire. The play is slight and a false move could crush it at any moment. Ina Claire gave it a flip with her finger tips at such moments as it seemed to sag.

Like most light comedies, "The Awful Truth" is over some little time before it ends. The players succeeded in concealing this admirably.

Richman's story concerns a young woman who gets a divorce from her husband through a misunderstanding. He suspects her of an affair and she becomes too annoyed to deny it. At the beginning we find her about to marry a self-made man who has made millions. He tells her of the open spaces and is a fearful bore, but the match seems necessary. However, the new fiancé, and more particularly his aunt, are worried about rumors they have heard concerning Lucy's misconduct. The first husband is called in to set the rumors at rest. He likes, as he believes, like a gentleman. Once he is back upon the scene Lucy realizes she loves him and, by means of a trick, removes his suspicions and abandons her millionaire for the old love.

Bruce McRae plays the part of the first husband and so there never was much suspense concerning the question of whether Lucy would return to him. The play depends not upon its plot, but upon brisk and amusing dialogue, superbly handled by a good cast. The trick upon which the last act depends is rather distressingly mechanical. Even good acting could not conceal that.

Richman's task would have been much more simple if he had not been obliged to go to such lengths to prove that Lucy actually was innocent. If he only had been willing to concede her a single affair, his story might have been even more amusing. Apparently, such liberties are not for sale in plays. The best the author would do was to insinuate just the slightest edge of suspicion at the end. That did not satisfy us. We hate persons in plays to have secrets from us.

In addition to Miss Claire's and Mr. McRae's, there are several excellent performances. Paul Harvey is unusually good as the self-made millionaire, and George Barrand, Louis Mackintosh and Cora Witherspoon all did gallantly. The result is a highly enjoyable evening.

'THIRD-DEGREE' CHARGE AGAINST SERGT. SCHMIDT DISMISSED

Prosecuting Attorney Drops Action Growing Out of Kidnaping Arrest Last November.

A charge against Detective Sergeant William Schmidt of using "third-degree" methods to obtain a confession from a prisoner was dismissed by Prosecuting Attorney Oakley in the Court of Criminal Correction yesterday. The prisoner involved was Frank Palermo, 25 years old, of 1424A Blair avenue, who was alleged to have confessed to Schmidt and others that he took part in the kidnaping last November of Vincent Castelli, 5, of 4551 Laclede avenue.

The charge against Schmidt was the same as that against Detective Sergeant William C. Murphy and Special Officers Richard Delaney and Edward Pierce, on a separate information, which was removed by an ordered verdict of acquittal in the same court last May, when Judge Hochdorfer sustained a demurrer that no case had been made by the State. Prosecuting Attorney Oakley said yesterday he felt it would be useless to proceed against Schmidt as he had only the same evidence as in the other case. Provisional Judge Jacob Lashly sat yesterday.

INCREASE OF $5 FROM $140 TO $145 A MONTH, FOR PATROLMEN

Advance, to Require No Additional Appropriation, Will Help Buy Winter Uniforms.

An increase of $5, from $140 to $145 a month, in pay of patrolmen, was approved today by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, effective Oct. 1, to run until the close of the city's fiscal year on April 1.

Approval was given upon the statement of the Police Board that no additional appropriation to the Police Department budget would be necessary to meet the increase.

Patrolmen are being required at this time to purchase new winter uniforms and overcoats and the increase was suggested to apply to that expense.

Cocoon Oil Makes a Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Multisilified cocoon oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply put two or three teaspoonfuls of Multisilified in a cup or glass with a little warm water, then moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Multisilified cocoon oil shampoo at any drug store. It is very cheap and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Multisilified.

TWO BOYS, 16 AND 17, HELD AS SAFE ROBBERS

One of Them Said to Have Confessed Two Jobs and Implicated the Other.

Two boys, one 16 and the other 17 years old, carried out two safebreaking jobs recently, one next door to the North Market Street Police Station, which police had believed was the work of expert safebreakers, according to a confession police say was made last night by Charles Martin, 17 years old, 2316 North Eleventh street, implicating a companion held at the House of Detention.

The boys were arrested yesterday by detectives near Eleventh and North Market streets. The confession states the boys entered the Doane Carton Co. building, 912 North Market street, from the roof about 11 p. m. on Sept. 14. The building adjoins the North Market station, police there having no knowledge of the attempted robbery until the following morning.

A policeman on Front steps. The following night, Martin told the police, they tried the combination off a safe at the Jacks-Evans Manufacturing Co., 1444 North Main street, and obtained $50.

Martin told a Post-Dispatch reporter he carried out the robberies in order to take money home to his mother at the end of the week. He had been idle but to cover this he recently told his mother, who was dependent on him, that he had found a job. He said he gained the idea of breaking into a safe through reading accounts of similar robberies in which the combinations were pried from safes.

Wanted to Cheer Up Mother. "My mother was dependent," he added, "so I wanted to cheer her up with a little money. I was arrested before I could get the money to her."

Tools stolen in the Doane building were used to knock the combination off the safe, Martin said, but before getting the door open they were frightened away when they mistook a whirling sound in an electric clock for a burglar alarm.

The confession stated they expected to get a payroll at the Jacks-Evans plant. Entry was gained by climbing a fire escape to a third-story window. Tools were stolen from the plant.

JEWELER, WHO WAS SHOT BY ROBBERS, UNDERGOES OPERATION

Edward Gotsch Halles After Bullet That Caused Paralysis Is Removed.

Edward Gotsch, 35 years old, of 3801 Labadie avenue, a jeweler, who was shot by robbers in his store in the Arcade Building Sunday morning, Sept. 10, was operated on this morning at the Baptist Hospital, Garrison and Franklin avenues, for the removal of a bullet that passed through his throat and lodged in the spine, causing paralysis of the entire body.

Gotsch rallied from the operation, which was performed by Dr. F. L. Morse of 4251 Maryland avenue, and it is believed that he now has a better chance of recovery.

There were two robbers, and one of them, Leo Giescke, 29, of 3216 North Eleventh street, died from bullet wounds inflicted by Gotsch, who resisted the attempt to rob his store. Gotsch was shot in the right hand also. The second robber escaped.

First Republican Measure in Nearly 10 Years Has Been 20 Months in the Making

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The longest and bitterest tariff history of the American people is expected to end at 4 p. m. today under a unanimous consent reached for a vote by the Senate on the adoption of the tariff report of the administration. Favorable action is regarded as certain, as is the approval of the measure by the House.

In the four hours of debate preceding the vote, the tariff bill made its final onslaught on the Senate. Underwood, its sponsor, delivered his principal address. While in Congress was about to be expected to carry it to the House, the campaign for its passage in November.

Twenty months in the making, the first protective measure in the tariff history of the United States, the measure has been 20 months in the making. The House and Senate Committee began on Jan. 6, 1921, and was passed by the House of Representatives on June 17, 1922.

For the first time in the tariff-making, the Senate bill item by item. The practice had been to draft schedules or only the in each schedule. Under plan the bill was rewritten on the Senate floor, but in changes were voted on recommendation of the Finance Committee.

After the Senate vote, the bill will be made ready for the day following his action.

In the four hours' debate to precede the final vote, opponents plan to their final fight on the tariff. The measure was opened yesterday by Simmons of North Carolina, its leader in the tariff fight for more than three years. He attacked the measure as a living cost to the people, and a year and would the formation of hundreds of thousands of trusts and corporations in restraint of trade.

The attack on the measure continued yesterday to the Senate floor, where it was continued by Senator C. W. McNamara, Republican, Iowa, pro-tempore, overruling the House's authority in broadening the tariff. McNamara's powers of the President's committee of American valuation than cost of products. An appeal was taken from McNamara's ruling, but the sustained on a vote of 73 to 23. Three Democrats, Brown, Cock and Randall, voted the chair, while one Republican, Follette, voted against the measure.

In his attack on the tariff, McNamara took issue with the Finance Committee's report of the equivalent of the tariff. He contended that the level was higher than in actual operation of the tariff.

McNamara's attack was met by a statement by Chairman of the Finance Committee, who said that the tariff was based on the cost of production in the United States.

FINAL PASSAGE OF

Unanimous Consent Agreement Reached for Vote on Conference Report on Measure at 4 P. M.

FAVORABLE ACTION
REGARDED AS CERTAIN

First Republican Protective Measure in Nearly 10 Years Has Been 20 Months or More in the Making.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The longest and bitterest tariff fight in the history of the American Congress is expected to end at 4 p. m. today under a unanimous consent agreement for a vote by the Senate at that hour on the adoption of the conference report of the administration bill. Favorable action is regarded as a foregone conclusion, as is the approval of the measure by President Harding.

In the four hours of debate that preceded the vote, the Democrats made their final onslaught on the bill, with Senator Underwood of Alabama, their leader, delivering the principal address. While their fight in Congress was about ended, they expected to carry it to the country during the campaign preceding the elections in November.

Twenty months in making. The tariff, the first Republican protective measure in nearly 10 years, has been 20 months and more in the making. The House Ways and Means Committee began hearings on Jan. 6, 1921, and the bill was passed by the House on July 21 of the same year.

For the first time in American tariff-making, the Senate considered the bill item by item. Heretofore the practice had been to discuss entire schedules or only the high spots in each schedule. Under the new plan the bill was rewritten gradually in the Senate floor, but most of the changes were voted on recommendations of the Finance Committee majority.

Will Become Law Day After Approval by the President.

After the Senate vote, the measure will be made ready for President Harding, and will become a law on the day following his approval of it.

In the four hours' debate that is to precede the final vote, Democratic opponents plan to continue their final fight on the bill, which was opened yesterday by Senator Simmons of North Carolina, minority leader in the tariff fight. Speaking for more than three hours, he assailed the bill as one that would increase living costs by billions of dollars a year and would result in the formations of hundreds of thousands of trusts and combinations in restraint of trade.

The attack on the measure "was confined yesterday to the Democratic side. Senator Cameron, Republican, Arizona, denouncing the action of the Senate conferees in yielding to the House managers on the Senate proposal to impose a tariff of 1 cent a pound on long staple cotton. He indicated that he would vote against the conference report.

Efforts of Democrats Fail.

Efforts of the Democrats to get the bill back into conference to limit the authority of the President in the matter of proclaiming American valuations failed. Senator Cummins, Republican, Iowa, president pro tempore, overruling a point of order that the conferees had exceeded their authority in broadening the powers of the President so as to permit of American valuation on other than coal tar products.

An appeal was taken from Senator Cummins' ruling, but the chair was sustained on a vote of 43 to 21. Three Democrats, Broussard, Hitchcock and Randall, voted to sustain the chair, while one Republican, La Follette, voted against the ruling.

In his attack on the tariff, Senator Simmons took issue with a statement by Chairman McAdams of the Finance Committee that the tariff measure was below the level of the equivalent of valuations.

Time in the famous Payne-Aldrich tariff law, he contended, was the level was higher, and that in actual operation of the bill it would prove to be lower, it would be "absolutely prohibitive."

Wool Tariffs Assailed.

Turning to the raw wool of the country, a secured pound, Senator Simmons said it appeared as though the conferees were making a "deliberate effort to mislead the people and to falsify the facts." He read of figures to show that the wool tariff rate at 2 1/2 cents a pound, was less than that proposed in the pending measure.

It will cost the American people $10,000,000,000 to $20,000,000,000 to start," he continued, "and that amount at the

Bulgarian Premier Has the King Trained; Stamboulisky Tells How He Does It and Says Boris Is Pleased and Devoted to Him

Peasant Prime Minister Declares Enemies "Asked King to Throw Me Over, but That Would Not Be in Conformity With Conventional Usage."

By the Associated Press.
SOFIA, Bulgaria, Aug. 25.—Alexander Stamboulisky, since his advent to power as Bulgaria's peasant-premier, has been furnishing Europe with no little amusement by the unceremonious and defiant way in which he has been treating King Boris, and by his indifferent attitude toward the ever-present question of reparations. Not long ago he told the King that if he did not do the bidding of the masses, he might find himself without a throne and in the midst of a republic. He added a warning that young Boris must not keep his eyes on both sides of the fence, that he could give his support to only one party, and that party the group in power.

The stalwart agrarian leader also has given voice to equally novel expressions on various questions of the day. "My enemies," he says, "asked the King to throw me over, but that would not be in conformity with conventional usage. And then they do not know the King. I have him well trained. I treat him like a son. I have been teaching him politics for three years, and he is quite devoted to me. We are going to amalgamate the Agrarians, Radicals and Social Democrats for the elections of 1924, unless I am assassinated in the meantime."

"I like the Bulgarian Communists," Stamboulisky declares, "because they support me without any engagement on my part, which is conventional usage. And then they do not know the King. I have him well trained. I treat him like a son. I have been teaching him politics for three years, and he is quite devoted to me. We are going to amalgamate the Agrarians, Radicals and Social Democrats for the elections of 1924, unless I am assassinated in the meantime."

Stamboulisky has voiced a warning as to the future. "Even should nothing else happen," he declared, "there will be a general mixup before long. Russia is persistently preparing a debacle which is inevitable. We shall plunge into this upheaval, too, and something is sure to come out of it. Wait and see."

TAMMANY LEADER FOR 20 YEARS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Twenty years ago tonight Charles E. Murphy became leader of Tammany Hall. He was 43 years old. Today only five district leaders who participated in the selection of Murphy are active in Tammany.

Murphy's regime as boss is the longest in the 133 years of Tammany's history. During his dictatorship Murphy has won five majority elections, named three governors and one United States Senator. With William H. Hearst a candidate for the governorship at the Democratic convention which will meet at Syracuse, Murphy faces what may prove to be the most critical period in his career.

BETTER AND CHEAPER
TWIN SISAL SOUGHT

Conference of Prison Wardens and Government Officials Plans Anti-Trust Action.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Plans to obtain better prices and quality of sisal for manufacturing burling twine were discussed today by representatives of the Oklahoma State Prison, Senator Capper said. The conference was arranged by Senator Capper, Republican of Kansas, chairman of the Senate agricultural bloc, who recently asked Attorney-General Daugherty to proceed under the Sherman antitrust act against the twine trust.

The conference was held at the Oklahoma State Prison, where Senator Capper said, he telegraphed a promise of support of the conference plans.

Co-operative purchasing of sisal by the state prison authorities was considered by the conferees in addition to their plans for procedure against the alleged monopoly.

That those said to control the Yucatan output were compelling American consumers to buy half of a stock of old and deteriorating sisal with an equal amount of new stock was charged at the conference. Use of the old sisal, it was stated, resulted in a weak binding twine causing complaints from farmers.

17 LOANS BY U. S. ANNOUNCED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Approval of 17 advances aggregating $503,000 for agricultural and livestock purposes is announced by the War Finance Corporation. The corporation also announced receipt of $2,000,000 from the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co. on account of loans aggregating $10,000,000, leaving a balance of $2,930,000 outstanding against that company. Repayments to the corporation since Jan. 4, 1922, on account of all loans totaled $125,000,000 on Sept. 15.

DIED UNNECESSARILY IN WAR

Head of Military Order Declares America "Specialized in Killing Its Own Men."

By the Associated Press.
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 19.—"This country has specialized in killing its own men. By that I mean that more than 50 per cent of the men killed in the last war were killed unnecessarily, because they didn't know how to fight." This was the statement made yesterday by Major-General George H. Harries, commander-in-chief of the Military Order of the World War, who is holding his convention at the Ambassador Hotel. The general advocated compulsory training.

Some of the first delegations to arrive were from New Orleans, San Francisco, St. Louis, Chicago and Richmond, Va.

Included in the list of speakers are Secretary of War Weeks, Gen. John J. Pershing, Gen. James Guthrie Harbord, Deputy Chief of Staff, Julian Lane Latimer, Major-General John Archer LeMay, commander of the United States Marines; Col. George S. Dumont of the French embassy at Washington; Maj. Bridges of the British embassy and official representatives of the Belgian and Italian armies.

Gen. Harries issued a statement in which he set forth the chief purpose of the convention as the awakening of Congress and the country to the danger of the "dangers of pacifism, insufficient defense and radicalism."

State Department Says Reply to American Note Is a Refusal to Agree.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Negotiations looking to the dispatch of an American investigating commission to Russia have "terminated" definitely, it was announced by the State Department yesterday after receipt of the Russian note giving consent to such an inquiry on condition that a similar commission of soviet representatives be permitted to investigate economic conditions in the United States.

A former statement issued by the department characterized the Russian reply as a "definite refusal" to agree to the American suggestion.

$239,000 FOR PRINTING BALLOT

Secretary Becker Mails Agreements to 115 Newspapers, One in Each County and One in St. Louis.

ALL MEASURES TO BE VOTED ON INCLUDED

Incumbent Follows Precedent in Arranging for Printing of Initiative and Referendum Proposals.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 12.—Employees of Secretary of State Charles U. Becker yesterday mailed to the publishers of 115 newspapers in Missouri, one in each county and the city of St. Louis, contracts for the publication of three constitutional amendments, 14 measures referred and two proposed by initiative, all to be voted upon Nov. 7, the total bill for which will be slightly in excess of $239,000. Most of this money will go to Republican county seat papers, in parcels of approximately $1082 each. Becker has no authority save precedent, so far as can be found, for having the bulk of this matter printed, as the only statute authorizing publication of statutes to be voted upon by the people, section 4841 of Revised Statutes, restricts such publication to proposed constitutional amendments. Of the 555 column inches of matter to be printed this time, the three proposed amendments comprise only 17 inches, for which the total bill from all the papers at the rate at which Becker is letting contracts, would be slightly more than $1082. The other 538 inches are for initiative and referendum measures.

Becker's authority for having initiative and referendum propositions published was questioned in letters to the Secretary some time ago by Alroy Phillips, a St. Louis attorney. Becker, however, declared in a letter to Phillips that he intended to "follow the precedent" set by his predecessor, who since 1910 had caused the publication of 22 initiative and referendum propositions under circumstances identical with those now existing and under section 4841, dealing solely with proposed amendments.

Attention has been called also to the fact that appropriations made by successive Legislatures to pay for these publications have been worded as "for the publication of constitutional amendments." But the publishers have been paid money so appropriated, for space devoted to initiative and referendum measures.

How Contracts Read.

It is noted also that Becker's contracts, mailed to the publishers of one paper in each county of the State and the City of St. Louis, which are to be signed and returned, read that: "I hereby acknowledge receipt of certified copy of constitutions and amendments to be published (blank for name of paper) for five consecutive insertions (four consecutive weeks) next preceding the general election to be held Nov. 7, 1922. Said publication will be set solid like copy and contain the same number of squares. Bill will be rendered in duplicate for not to exceed (blank where $2082 will be inserted) as per form of proof of copy received. To be paid out of appropriation to be made by Fifty-second General Assembly, for publishing constitutional amendments."

Becker is in the Ozarks on a fishing trip with Gov. Hyde, so he could not be asked how he expects this contract, applying only to constitutional amendments, to cover the 538 column inches of initiative and referendum measures, nor how the net Legislature, whose attention undoubtedly will be called to the law, will be able to appropriate $239,000 legally for publications for which apparently no authority but precedent can be found.

Maximum Legal Rate.

It is stated also by Becker's employees that the Secretary of State has let these contracts at the maximum legal rate allowed by statute.

Computed on the basis of column inches the $2082 is to be paid to the publisher for the 555 column inches of matter to be published at $2.75 per inch for the five insertions. No effort, so far as is known, was made to obtain a lower rate, as no bids were received.

In view of the fact that many of the rural papers which will print this matter will be able to obtain plates from newspaper supply houses at nominal prices, thus eliminating the cost of type composition and the cost of the plates, it is expected to be a large advertising rate of few, if any, rural papers are as high as that to be received for this matter, though many of them

KANSAS GOVERNOR CLAIMS BENEFICIAL RESULTS FOR INDUSTRIAL COURT LAW
IN TELLING OF OPERATIONS IN STRIKES

Allen Says Freedom of Speech Remains and Will Continue Unless Lock-Jaw Epidemic Comes.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
20 Wyatt Bids.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Highly beneficial results are claimed for the Industrial Court law by Gov. Allen of that State in a letter to Representative Homer Hoch of Kansas, made public by the latter here today. Desiring to answer charges that the law had failed, Hoch wired to Allen for a statement on the effects of the law in general and its operation during the shop and coal strikes in particular. Allen's reply, according to Hoch, makes a "remarkable showing" for the law.

Allen remarks incidentally, in apparent reference to his controversy with his old-time friend, William Allen White, that "we still remain a free-speaking commonwealth." He doubts, he says, whether "anything would affect our freedom of speech unless it be a general epidemic of lockjaw."

Following are extracts from his statement:

43 of 45 Decisions Accepted.

"Acting as a court of adjudication, the Industrial Court has rendered 43 important decisions which relate to wages and working conditions in the industries of transportation, fuel and food. Of these 45 decisions, 43 have been accepted, both by employers and employees. Probably 90 per cent of the cases have been brought by employees."

"Here is a typical case: Noon after the Industrial Court was established, the Railway brought a case for increase in wages. They asked the court to make a survey of the cost of living and give to the carmen a living wage. The court made a careful survey of the living conditions of the district. They made an award increasing the wages of the carmen. In that award the president of the court, calling attention to the fact that the award took into consideration not a living wage, but a fair and just wage, pointed out that the law directed the court to give to each laboring man a fair and just wage, which, of course, is a living wage plus enough to enable a man to give to himself and his family the benefits of modern civilization by the practice of reasonable frugality."

"Both the carmen and the railway officials accepted the award as being just and satisfactory. They then took the award and created it of a basis for a readjustment of the wages of all the various crafts employed in this traction company. Some months later the railway officials complained that there had been so sharp a decline in the cost of living that it would be necessary to employ a man to give to himself and his family the benefits of modern civilization by the practice of reasonable frugality."

"The carmen and the railway officials accepted the award as being just and satisfactory. They then took the award and created it of a basis for a readjustment of the wages of all the various crafts employed in this traction company. Some months later the railway officials complained that there had been so sharp a decline in the cost of living that it would be necessary to employ a man to give to himself and his family the benefits of modern civilization by the practice of reasonable frugality."

Controversies Referred to Court.

"When, a short time after this, the railway company and the men, through their chosen representatives, met to write a new contract, they cut out all of the elaborate provisions in the contract which contained the rules for conciliation and arbitration, and substituted the provision that thereafter all controversies between the men and the company should be referred directly to the Kansas Industrial Court."

"The first decision of the Industrial Court in this case increased the wages of the men something like 30 per cent. The second decision decreased their wages a trifle over 10 per cent. In both instances the court held the confidence both of the men and of the company."

"During the strike in the packing industry, although Kansas City, Kan., is the second packing center of the United States, no difficulty was experienced in keeping the packing houses functioning. Although there were riots, killings and property destruction calling for troops at Chicago, St. Joseph, Omaha and Oklahoma City, and other packing centers, there was no call in Kansas for any extra protection to secure obedience to the law."

"The Industrial Relations Act has been applied more frequently to the mining industry during the last two years than to any other one of the four main industries declared by the law to be essential to the public welfare. During the last year prior to the establishment of the Industrial Court, there was an average of 13 1/2 strikes a month in the Kansas field, and the average number of days a miner worked was 141 for the year."

"Under the Court of Industrial Relations the average number of days worked was something over 236. When Alexander Howat went to jail at Columbus he declared that no coal would be mined in the district while he was in jail. The State reminded the miners that any man who wished to work in a mine would be given protection. Immediately 300 or 400 miners went back to work. This number increased daily until by the time Howat had served two months the payroll in the mining district was normal."

Action in Recent Strike.

"When the recent coal strike arrived the Industrial Court officials surveyed and found that all the coal cars and practically all the coal bins of the State were full. An unusual supply had been produced in anticipation of the threatened strike. The Court notified the operators that it would be necessary to operate the mines sufficiently to produce fuel for the domestic and industrial purposes of the State."

"It was made clear, of course, that if the operators could not secure this production, it would be necessary for the State to take over the mines under the provisions of the law and to operate them under Governmental direction for the purpose of preventing a fuel famine. The operators pledged their co-operation, so it was unnecessary for the State to take over the mines."

"At the end of the first month of the strike, the coal surplus having diminished somewhat, a few mines began to operate, producing something like 27 per cent of the normal output. Each month the production was increased and at no time was there a shortage of coal, either for domestic or industrial purposes, in this State. By the first of August, we were producing 50 per cent of the average output for this season of the year.

Charges That Law Had Failed Are Answered in Statement Made for Representative Hoch.

"One of the singular things about it is that 2200 men were producing coal as much coal as 11,000 men produced in normal times. In other words, less than 25 per cent of the personnel was producing 50 per cent of the normal output. This indicates how much the coal industry is over-manned."

"The total production of coal in Kansas during the strike not only enabled us to supply fuel for all industrial and domestic purposes in Kansas, but to send a considerable quantity out of the State to supply neighboring needs."

"Without actual power of law, but with rather elastic powers of regulation, the court secured from the operators of the State the assurance that the price of coal would not be increased, but that the price of coal would be the same as that which prevailed Sept. 1, 1921. There is no question but that this action of the court saved at least 50 cents per ton which would amount to several million dollars a year to Kansas consumers. The court has also taken up the subject of undue profits with the retailers, with the result that Kansas coal prices will be lower this winter than they would have been if the operators and the retailers had followed out their original intention of increasing the price of coal 12 1/2 per cent."

Favored in Three Elections.

"In three elections, one of which has been general and the other two primaries, the Industrial Court idea has overwhelmingly won in the industrial districts of the State."

"In the present railway strike, as in the packing strike, the court has not been able to enter into the merits of the case. It has been an interstate strike, following the award of the Federal Board, and the action of a mining leader who kept the members of the craft from placing their cause before the Kansas courts upon its merits. Therefore, the only provisions of the law which have been operative are the antipicketing provisions and such other regulations as guaranteed to the public the continuous operation of transportation."

"Fortunately, it has not been necessary for the State, in any instance, to take over the operation of any railroad. The nearest to this was when the Missouri Pacific announced its intent to take back some 25 trains in Kansas. The State challenged the right of the Missouri Pacific to stop these trains and demanded the reason. The Missouri Pacific failed to state the reason that there was an insufficient supply of coal. The State immediately guaranteed to the Missouri Pacific a sufficient quantity of coal to keep all the trains going, and the trains were not taken off. Subsequently, it developed that this was not the real reason the Missouri Pacific had for taking off its trains. It had desired for some time to take off some brand new trains, the annulment of which was sought under the guise of an emergency."

"A letter has recently come to me from the editor of the Railway Journal of Chicago, in which he says that one of the difficulties at the employment agencies which are gathering the personnel with which to supply railroad shops in the United States, is that all men who apply for work express a preference to come to Kansas. By reason of the fact that Kansas is giving protection to all who wish to work, most of the railway shop craft activities are under way in this State today."

ARMY GETS NEW TYPE OF PLANE FOR PULITZER TROPHY RACE

Machine Designed by Grover Loening Has Engine Capable of Developing 650-Horsepower.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—A new type of racing monoplane, said to be the highest powered for its size ever built, has just been completed at the plant of the Loening Aeronautical Engineering Corporation for entry by the United States Army Air Service in the Pulitzer Trophy Race at Detroit.

Designed by Grover Loening, inventor of the Loening air yacht, the machine weighs 2700 pounds, ready for flight. An outstanding feature is the heavy continuous spars of the main wing structure, which extend throughout the fuselage and serve as chassis members.

The engine, which is mounted at the nose, is a 600-horsepower 12-cylinder packard, capable of developing 650. It is the same type, with improvements, as that of the Ver-ville plane in which Capt. C. C. Mealey, in 1920, won the Pulitzer trophy race at Mitchell Field, Mineola, L. I. His average speed for 132 miles was 178 miles an hour.

GERMANY WILL SPEED UP
MARK-MAKING PRESSES OCT. 15

Currency in Circulation Will Be Increased by About 200,000,000, 600 Marks a Month.

(Copyright, 1922.)
BERLIN, Sept. 19.—Beginning Oct. 15 Germany will issue 7,000,000,000 paper marks a day, increasing the amount of currency in circulation by about 200,000,000, 600 marks a month. At present there are 290,000,000,000 outstanding while six weeks ago there were 145,300,000,000.

The Reichbank presses are unequal to the task and private printers in Berlin and Leipzig are under contract to produce notes. All the presses are racing to put out notes of from 100 to 5000 marks denomination. Fifty thousand mark notes will soon be issued in quantities to carry the country through the next four weeks.

The shortage of paper money is so great, however, that many firms are holding what they have in their safes to make pay rolls. This only adds to the shortage and employers who have no currency are offering banks 10 per cent for enough to pay their men. Once this crisis is passed Germany will be flooded with paper money.

The O'Fallon Park Dispute.

YOur editorial in Thursday's Post-Dispatch on the suggested elimination of picnics in O'Fallon Park was evidently written without knowledge of the plan proposed by the O'Fallon Park Protective Association. The association does not ask that family and ordinary basket picnics be prohibited from using the park. In using the term picnics, the association had in mind, and so qualified in its position, the holding of the big picnics, some of which are attended by thousands, and partake in many cases of the best garden variety. In the case of O'Fallon Park, such use, a few weeks after the first blush of spring, transforms the park into a shabby commons, and discourages its use for the very purposes for which parks are supposed to exist, viz., a grassy, shady and refreshing objective for family recreational life.

The writer knows of no other city that permits its so-called parks, unless specially provided, picnic grounds are attached, to be abused in the manner in which these great mass gatherings stamp out the grass and injure the trees. Picnics of this sort should be given in places specially prepared for them, as in Meramec Highlands and similar resorts. As to the question of use by colored people, it is admitted by our practice of segregation in schools, churches, and social organizations, that the races prefer not to meet in intimate social contact. This is the result of a natural law, and no mandate of government will change it. To permit a park no larger than O'Fallon to be used for negro picnics means the establishment of the same as a negro playground, since the whites will not use it at the same time, and its use by the colored race gradually displaces the whites altogether. No matter what social students and reformers may say, the intimate contact of whites and blacks in a public playground will not come to pass in our generation, and perhaps never. There is nothing unfair to the negro in these premises and no intended denial of his right to recreation. The object of the association is to preserve the life and aspirations. This will be evident to negroes who are fair, and who join with the whites to prevent a possible clash that may injure the reputation of our city.

Mass in the Guardhouse.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
I am writing under the signature of "A Friend of the Boys" to get the information that they feed the prisoners in the guardhouse at the Barracks warmed-over gravy, wieners and doughnuts. The prisoners get the same food as the soldiers. Any time this party wishes to see how the prisoners are fed, he is welcome to go out to the guardhouse and find out. I think this person ought to find out before he publishes such a piece in the paper. A SOLDIER WHO KNOWS.

The La Follette Interview.

I WANT to congratulate you on your journalistic enterprise in obtaining and making public the program and views of Senator La Follette, in Sunday's paper. This article was a revelation to me. I hadn't the slightest idea that there existed in the country—much less in the Senate—a man who had made such a profound study of conditions in America, to devise remedies for relief. Can you tell me why it is that the press of the country has uniformly treated La Follette as a half-baked radical, with no constructive views of any kind? There is much to be said for his plan to return the national resources to the Federal Government. Nobody can doubt that the Government at present is controlled and administered by a few wealthy interests. I wonder, however, if the purchase of the deposits of natural wealth would accomplish the undoing of this condition—which threatens the very life of democracy. Why not have the Government take possession of all the land of whatever nature, without regard for its under-soil properties?

I merely suggest this. Perhaps Senator La Follette has cogent reasons against it. At any rate, it is encouraging to find, among the welter of third-rate men at Washington, that there is one man who has really used his head for a purpose other than to support a campaign hat.

J. J. McDOWELL.

And Yet Again.

I READ with interest your article in Thursday's Post on "Closing the Parks to Picnics," which was indeed very good. As you said, the parks are for use, and to those protesting the use of O'Fallon Park by colored people, I wish to state that as I see it one of the main reasons why colored people use O'Fallon Park more than other parks is because of its location.

Every school child in St. Louis can go to O'Fallon Park without its mother, who refuses to work all day and join her youngsters in the evening. Even strangers are directed to O'Fallon Park, and told that the Sarah street car will put them off at the park. In reply to complaints about music, etc., I wish to say there must be a mistake. For two-thirds of the picnics given in O'Fallon Park are given by schools and churches, all of whom employ "union bands." As a rule, these men play from noon until 7 p. m., and when a fortune will play as late as 8 p. m.

THERESA SMITH.

SOWING—NOT REAPING.

The correspondence published in the Sunday Post-Dispatch between Secretary Smith of the University of Michigan and the president of a West Virginia coal company reveals the profiteer at his brazen worst. To the former's protest against the excessive price quoted the latter smugly observed that "folks usually make hay when the sun shines." He remarked, further, that the law of supply and demand is still functioning, that the Constitution of the United States protects him in his legal plundering and voiced his scorn for the feeble efforts of Mr. Hoover and Congress to control the price of coal or restrain the avarice of coal producers.

The insolence of this operator's greed is without modern parallel. It were foolish to imagine, either, that a mentality so obtuse, feudal and unscrupulous would be impressed by anything the university officer says. Nevertheless, the university officer has said some things that ought to impress intelligent operators. His alternative, for example, that if this is the attitude of operators generally, then "the sooner the Government takes over the mines the better," expresses the thought uppermost in the public mind. Coal operators ought also to be impressed with the axiom propounded by Secretary Smith that "the reason back of legislation is the moral abuse of conditions preceding such legislation."

The American people are today witnessing a striking demonstration of that truth. Many factors entered into prohibition, but the fundamental provocation lay in the abuse of moral conditions—in the rapacious disregard by the liquor interests of public decency. The remedy in this instance is, we believe, unwise, and the remedy of government ownership and operation of the coal mines might be disappointing, but when great systematic moral or economic abuses become established the people will try to cure them and they will not hesitate at any remedy, however drastic.

Coal operators will make a fatal mistake to deride the warnings of this university officer as mere academic vexation. It is the best of advice this man is giving them. They should heed it. If they exploit the present public need they will not be making hay while the sun shines—they will be sowing the wind.

THE K S D ACHIEVEMENT.

K S D station of the Post-Dispatch, in making a test attempt to reach the Pacific Ocean last Tuesday night, not only attained its objective but was heard in every one of the 48 states of the Union, on steamships on the two oceans, on the Gulf of Mexico and as far north as Alberta, Canada, and the Gulf of St. Lawrence. This much is known from reports received. How much farther into the oceans and the uninhabited reaches of Northern Canada the waves may have penetrated is left to conjecture.

By the test of this one evening it was shown, in part at least, what can be done with the miracle of the radio wave. What will be done—there is a field that staggers speculation. Nature's elements may be watched and reported almost as simply as if they were seen with a single eyeglass, and weather preparations may be made accordingly. If the nation were unexpectedly confronted with an enemy, the radio could do for the four corners of the nation almost instantly what Paul Revere did for the Massachusetts countryside.

The K S D management of the Post-Dispatch, we believe, may be pardoned for its pride in an achievement which, so far as is known, has not yet been paralleled on the American continent.

KANSAS CITY'S "BLOODY SUNDAY."

Kansas City dedicated its new automobile speedway with a flare of glory and a rain of disaster. One dead, two perhaps mortally injured and six in hospitals, is a gruesome price to pay for an afternoon of excitement. The event and its fruits serve to raise again the question of whether professional automobile racing is a justifiable practice. In late years such races have smacked strongly of the Roman holiday, with the tigers of velocity and momentum substituted for the leopards of the arena.

Formerly such races served a useful purpose in discovering defects of construction. Henry Ford himself once drove his old "999" to victory. But that era has passed. All the large manufacturers now have ample equipment for testing their machines thoroughly, scientifically and safely. It is notable that the largest makers no longer enter their cars. Experimental work is carried on in the shops, as it should be. There will always be men careless enough of life to risk it for glory and sufficient purses, but a nation which unqualifiedly condemns bullfighting should not tempt them to do so, merely for the purpose of satiating a morbid appetite for thrills—in perfect safety to the spectators.

WIPING OUT A DISGRACE.

The evidence of the regret and humiliation of St. Louis fans over the lamentable incident at Sportsman's Park Saturday and the testimony as to the age of the bottle thrown and his possibly innocent intentions are now sufficient, we believe, to enable St. Louis sports lovers to look the world in the face. The Browns and Rooters' Club and the Cardinals have added rewards totaling $1050 to the $1000 offered by Ban Johnson for the arrest of the bottle thrower. Witnesses have testified that the offender was a boy, perhaps as young as 10 years; that he was not in a position to see the player who was hit and that he probably was hurling the missile at the ball itself rather than at the player. If so the deed was a mere accident, though the result of a foolhardy and irresponsible impulse.

If, however, the bottle hurler had been of responsible years and malicious intent, his act met, so far as can be observed, with 100 per cent condemnation and resentment on the part of St. Louis fans. The deed was their humiliation. It was a blow that wounded the Browns and all St. Louis more than it wounded "Whitey" Witt. Though it was an instance of the worst imaginable sportsmanship, the rallying of the St. Louis baseball world to repudiate the act will have the effect of a lesson in good sportsmanship. The management of the club has shown its concern by undertaking to make a repetition of the atrocity physically impossible. Let us hope that such precautions are unnecessary, that irresponsible urchins in the crowd can be controlled and that rowdies and rowdism may be completely eliminated.

THE PEARL-AND-DIAMOND CROWD.

Considered by and large, the Hordney-McCumber tariff rates may be excessive, but the charge that the rapacity of the bill's authors knew no limit can be refuted. If one will turn to the jewelry schedule he will find, to his surprise and, perhaps, delight, that the duty on pearls has been left precisely as the blundering Democrats fixed it, while persons who prefer their diamonds unset will pay only half the tax levied by the Underwood law.

It may be objected, we are aware, that diamond addicts and pearl fiends are able to pay all the traffic will bear and, what's more, ought to be made to pay it. But that sullen, unlovely attitude roots down into the bitter class prejudice which all sky-high protectionists deplore. Instead of upbraiding the gentlemen who framed this larcenous measure for exempting their pearl-and-diamond constituency from taxation, should we not, in a spirit of pure Polyantha patriotism, rejoice at the discovery that the ultimate consumer of jewelry will have to contribute scarcely anything to the maintenance of the Government and the profits of the special privilege?

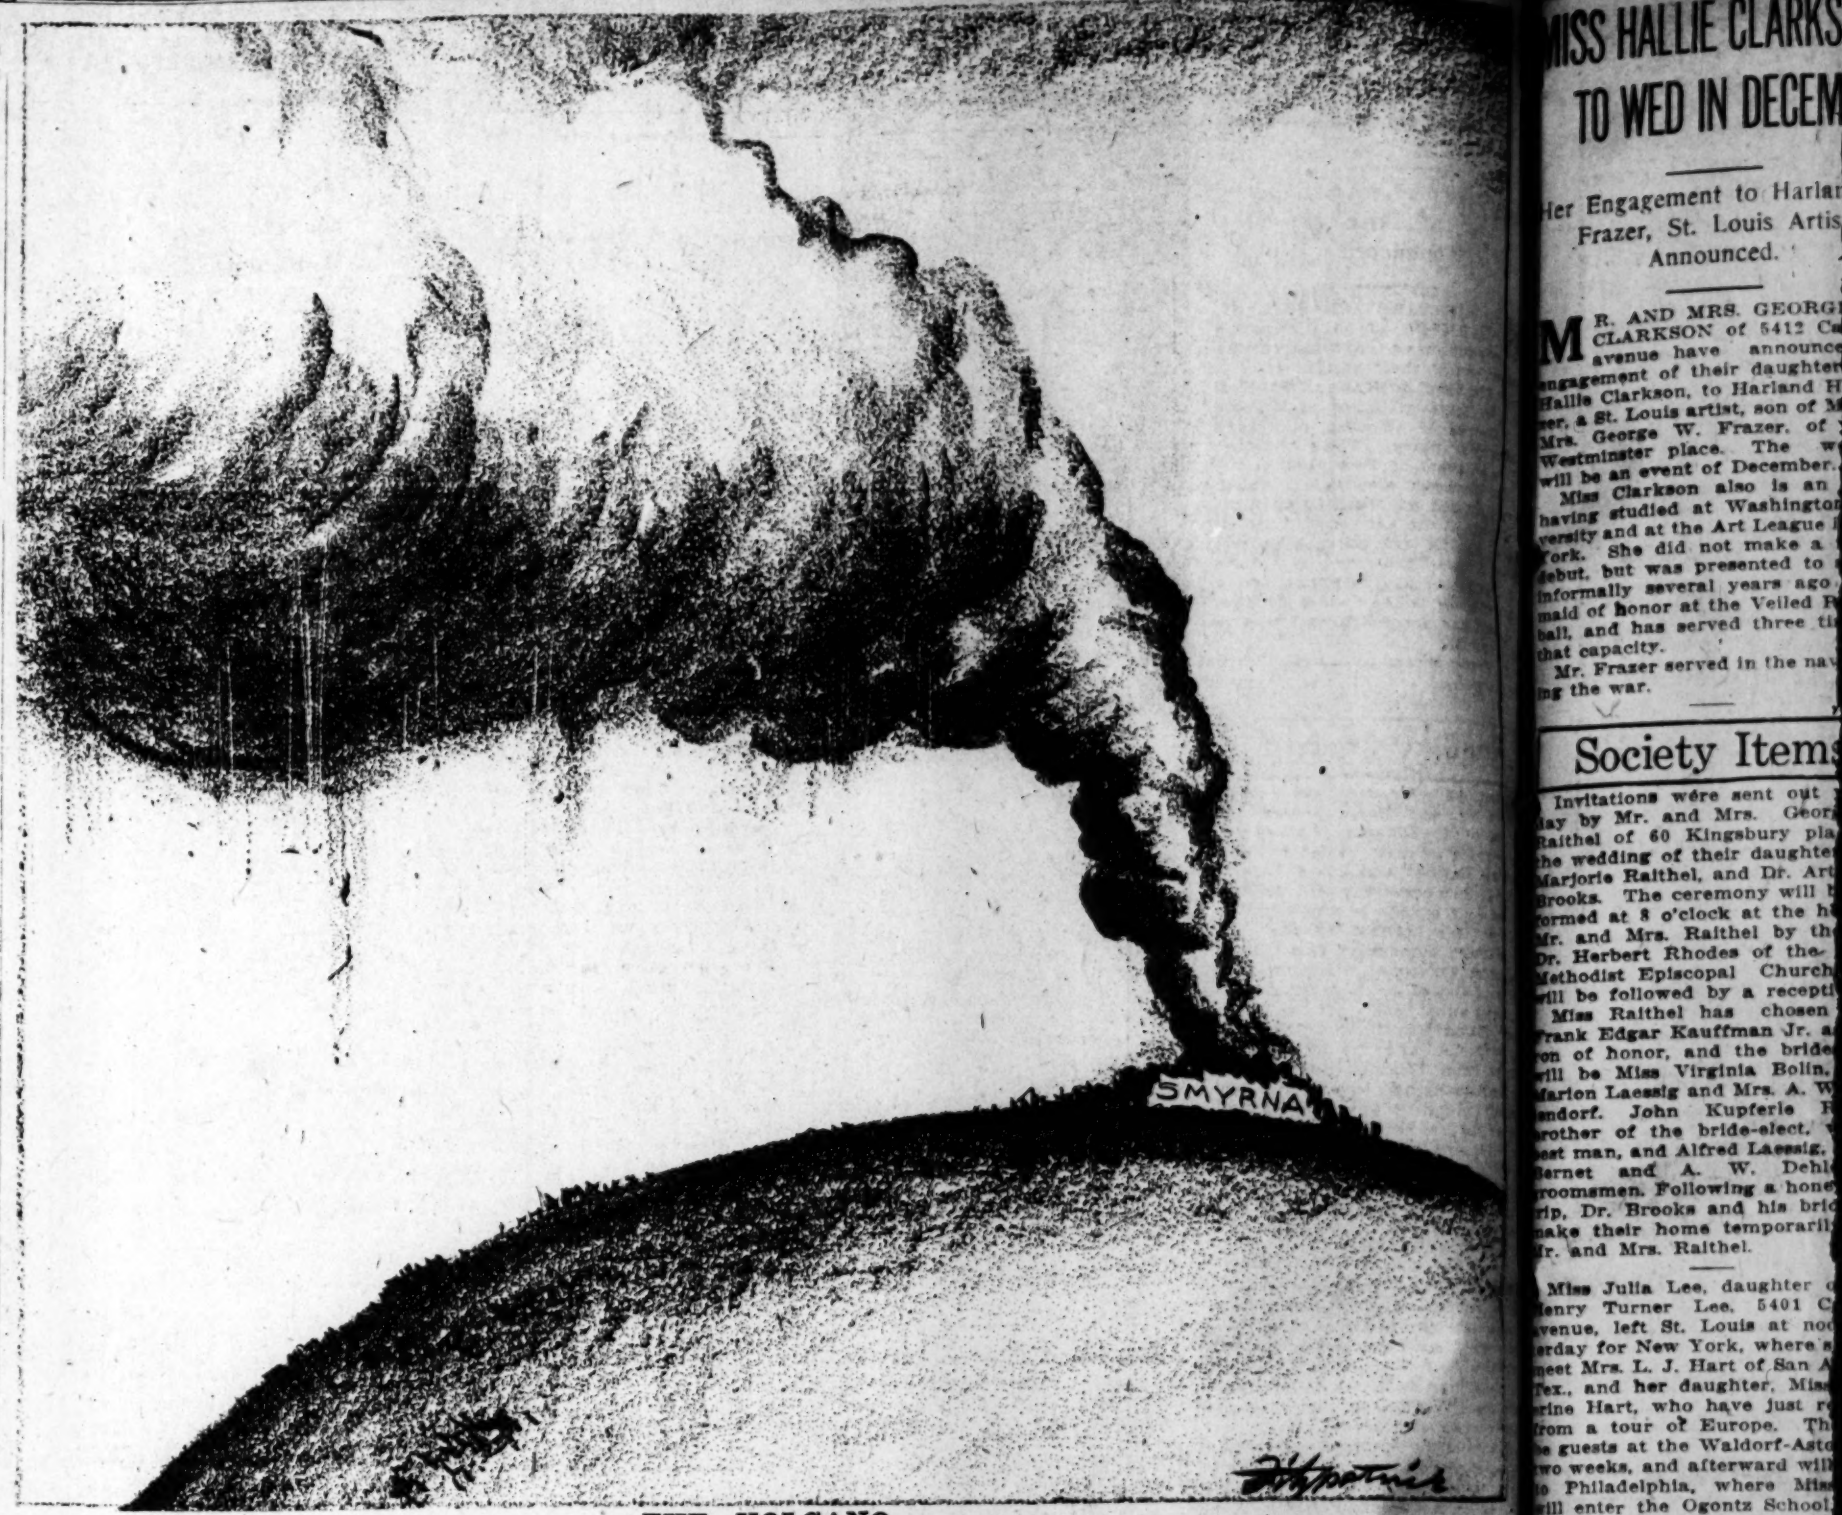

THE REVENUE BATTLE.

Gov. Hyde is struggling heroically to oust Thomas Speed Mosby from the office of State Beverage Inspector, and Mr. Mosby, with equal heroism and infinitely more success, refuses to be removed. And there ye are, as Mr. Dooley was wont to observe.

It is an unfortunate impasse. What the outcome will be we do not venture to forecast. Sentiment as to the result, we suppose, is divided along partisan lines. That cleavage is easily understood. There are a thousand, perhaps ten thousand, Republicans who would like to inspect our beverages, and as this is a Republican administration, they insist that this privilege, with its perquisites, belongs to one of their number. On the other hand, tradition has it that a Democrat never resigns an office, and practice, with rare exceptions, conforms to that tradition. Under the circumstances the nonpartisans among us may sympathize both with the legion of Republicans and the lone Democrat.

As to whether our beverages are being capably inspected by Mr. Mosby is a question that does not seem to have entered into the conflict. But in an enlightened government that would be the only question involved. Some day we shall doubtless achieve that degree of intelligence where fitness for the office will determine the identity of the official. We are a long distance from that age of reason now and under the administration of Gov. Hyde are making no perceptible progress towards it.

THE VOLCANO.

JUST A MINUTE

Written for the POST-DISPATCH
By Clark McAdams

SPEED MOSBY does not think anything of his post as State Beverage Inspector to make room for a Republican successor, and there is a promise that the battle between them will increase in heat and tumult until we all get a good look into Speed's department. Once we get that, appraising ourselves of the waste of tax money on political parasites for whom we have no use in God's world, discovering nepotism in its effulgence and most of the faults of democracy crying for correction, we shall move upon beverage inspection and destroy it utterly. It is when politicians fall out that taxpayers get their dues.

Automobile men suspect that it was not in charity to those unable to pay high prices for coal that Hank Ford closed his plant. They suspect that Hank has a new car up his sleeve and is fixing to spring it. The man who said he would not give 10 cents for all the art in the world and backed it up with an automobile having all the gracelessness of a washing machine is likely finding himself pushed by cars over which Art has run her refining fingers. It would make Praxiteles peer from his grave to laugh if Hank should suddenly turn up with something savoring of the grace of gondolas.

Sir: I was deeply affected by what you said about putting in St. Louis. Of course, it should be surrounded by every refinement of which we are capable. If it is true that someone in the gallery did say something at the instant when Mrs. Mida of Chicago was about to puff in her match with Miss Pop, it cannot matter what that something was. The obligation upon us is to preserve silence. At the moment of the player addresses the ball on the green a hush should fall upon the scene. If a woman violated that propriety we must believe it due to the newness of women to golf. I never heard of anything of the sort occurring here among men. I have seen great galleries of men and women without visible sign even of respiration while someone undertook a difficult putt. It is useless for us to develop Eddies. Held if we are to fall in those exquisite manners commanded by golf everywhere else in the world. Outsiders will not come here to play, and we shall find ourselves merely looking on at a distance.

NIBLICK.

"Would you know the dog if you saw him?" asked the city dog poundkeeper when Rags' master arrived in the early morning in search of his 11-year-old pooch, which had disappeared via the dog-catcher route.

"Safely would, and he me, too," answered the owner, confident that there would be an "instantly mutual recognition" were they to appear to each other.

"Well come on in, and take a look," said the pound head, as he led the way into a large room containing animals of various sizes and breeds.

"Here he is!" exclaimed the anxious master, pointing to his pet across the room.

"Here, Rags!" he called in his most feeling tone.

Twelve dogs, of as many different kinds and sizes, instantly answered the call, affectionately rushing him as if he were a long-lost friend. The real Rags remained unmoved, not even batting an eye.

When the dismayed and embarrassed owner recovered his composure, he pointed the animal out to the keeper, paid his assessment, put the animal in his automobile and stole away.

A prolonged study of statistics leads to the inference that more automobiles were stolen in this country last year than were manufactured in 1899. This is progress—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Frank Walsh says it is safe to invest in Russia today. How much has Frank invested?

Sir: Delirious means have been uttered concerning the prowess of our baseball team, and the enormous benefit which accrues to our fair city from the present situation. But the most salient and outstanding aspect of the matter, as I see it, has been the advancement of the sport writers to the front pages of our dailies. The writer had not, until this occurred, been acquainted with the fraternity; the meeting has been a revelation.

I observe, in the morning paladium, that an incident occurring early in Sunday's game "augured" ill for the day. I observe, further, that it is nothing for this rapacious Rowell to launch into half a dozen lines of frenzied phrase before engaging upon a positive statement. The medium of communication is bizarre and foreign. I am reminded of Henry Menckens's description of Dr. Prof. Thorstein Veblen's style. The sport chroniclers become enmeshed in their own interminable sentences, very much in the fashion of a bull in a barbed wire fence. They leap, they heave, they snort, they perspire, and at times seem on the point of calling for the police. It is a spectacle to baffle the vulgar and to give the judicious grief.

In brief, the phenomenon which we now witness should have a wholesome effect. Those "trendy" gentlemen might have carried on the atrocious practice indefinitely on the inside of the papers had not circumstances and the esteemed Browns contrived to bring them into the white, pitiless light of the front page. Let us hope that our managing editors will never again permit it to be publicly said that a fly ball was caught "in back of" second base.

PHILO.

Fayette (Mo.) Advertiser: "An automobile drove up and stopped in front of the courthouse" in Fayette the other day, and from a casual inspection by a spectator 100 feet away it was impossible to tell whether three men, three women; two men and one woman; two women and one man; a woman, a man and a girl; a woman, a man and a boy; two men and a boy; two women and a boy; two men and a girl; or two women and a girl, got out. All three looked just alike. They all wore pants."

It would be interesting to know how the death rate over on the East Side compares with the grade crossing mortality rate.

The MIRROR OF PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the question of the day.

BAKER AND THE BRITANNICA.

From the New York World.

FOR the editors of the Encyclopedia Britannica to say that their judgment still approves the silly account given in that work of Newton B. Baker, ex-Secretary of War, is no defense. It merely proves their judgment the more obstinately wrong. And judgment obstinately wrong is no case may find its authority in other cases greatly weakened. That "the charge of plagiarism" was often brought against Mr. Baker; that some people accused him of lacking "energy, force and ability"; that others thought he "lacked preparation adequately" for the war—all that may be true, but is trivial and unimportant. We people want to know about Mr. Baker. Is he a hero? What did he do?—not a positive reputation long after, of what silly people and bitter partisan opponents said of him in a fit of excitement. Suppose the Britannica were to give George Washington "an American politician" of whom people said that he lacked ability, were he to say as President and speculated in public lands—and were to present that as an adequate characterization. It might be more speciously but no more grotesquely absurd than the sketch of Mr. Baker.

When the Britannica makes its mistake in accepting a temporary partisan view of Mr. Baker adopted by the Republican National Committee for campaign purposes, instead of a temperate straightforward biography.

THE TARIFF BILL.

From the New Republic.

THE tariff has finally emerged from confusion with all its abominations intact. There is no wool schedule, the sugar schedule, the wheat schedule. Even the dye embargo, which was eliminated from the bill by both House and Senate, has been restored in conference, and the alignment of interests is such that it will probably be pushed over along with the rest. A final comment on the ways of tariff makers was afforded by the decision of the conference to shingle on the free list in response to the pleas and threats of Senators Nelson and Kellogg of Minnesota. It seems that the lumber interests of this State have extended their operations to Canada, and as they no longer recognize the tariff, it is abolished so far as their products are concerned.

OBEDIENCE TO LAW.

From the American Lumberman.

LAW is a rule of conduct that derives its force from its observance. Flouting the law, whether by the rich or the poor, by the big or the little, by the intelligent or the ignorant, endangers every right that law is designed to make secure. Without law and obedience to law there can be no liberty for the individual and no security for property rights, and without these there is no incentive to work, to save, to build and to create. The first article in the creed of every American is "Obey the law." Obedience to the law and respect for all agencies of government make a nation great; contempt for the law saps the foundations of government and of society itself. Change follows. "Order is heaven's first law." The alternative is disorder; and when disorder holds sway life and property are destroyed. All that keeps or accumulating property is law, and the basis of civilized society is annihilated. The vital necessity is a renewed respect for law and duly constituted authority. Many, if not most, of the present difficulties are rooted in disregard for not contempt for law and order. The man, the man of property and influence, must set an example in obedience to law for the man, who also must respect the law, which assures him liberty to grasp his opportunities. In co-operation with and in obedience to the law can we insure the property and happiness of America.

PROSPECT FADES IN COUNTY FOR FUSION ELECTION TICKET

Democratic Committee to Meet After Clean Election League Has Placed Candidates in Field.

SELECTIONS MAY NOT PLEASE DEMOCRATS

Mass Meeting to Be Held Tonight in Webster Groves Armory to Fill Out League Ticket.

Prospects of fusion of the Clean Election League with the Democratic Central Committee of St. Louis County to defeat the Republican machine, accused of stealing the primary, after surviving frequent delays, have faded to a vague possibility.

Advocates of a fusion attempted to have the Democratic Committee meet yesterday afternoon to decide on the fusion, and then, if the decision was favorable, to consult with the Executive Committee of the league, meeting in 1923 Equitable Building, on the choice of candidates. Now it is understood that the Democratic Committee will meet tomorrow, after the league ticket has been placed in the field in a mass meeting tonight in the Webster Groves Armory.

How Committee Stands. Fusion has been opposed by five members of the Democratic committee. The other five, while in favor of the league's aims, are primarily Democrats, and, without their preference being consulted in making up the ticket, there is the possibility that they will not like the finished article.

The league committee, however, has some idea of their choices from previous discussions, and will include some candidates who are on the Democratic ticket, although the league has been relying for its chief strength on candidates who, it believes, got a majority of votes in the Republican primary, but were counted out.

The plan for a fusion was that the Democratic Committee would leave certain existing vacancies on their ticket, and would have some of their candidates resign in favor of league candidates. The league also would select some Democratic candidates for their ticket, but the tickets would not be made to coincide throughout.

League's Principal Choices. The principal places on the Democratic ticket wanted by the league for its candidates were those of collector, for which the league preference was Willis Benson, defeated by County Judge William Shields, Esq. lieutenant, in the primary; President County Judge, for which William Preiss, defeated Republican, was considered desirable, and Circuit Clerk, for which A. D. Willecken, incumbent, who ran strongly in the Republican primary, was the choice.

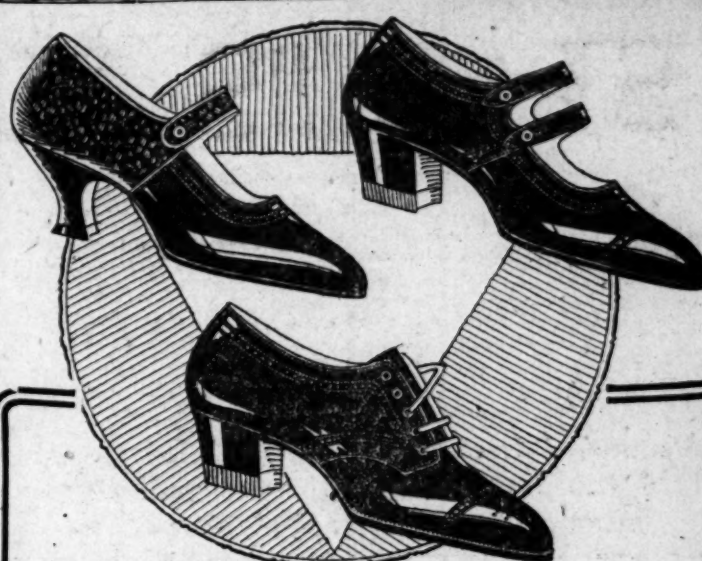

The Democratic candidates nominated in the primary are considered strong, and it is doubtful that they will be withdrawn in favor of the league's choices. The probable effect will be to defeat both Democratic and league candidates. The league will draw its voting strength from the "thoughtful" Republicans outraged by the primary and from Democrats of the same class, having to contend with "staunch" members of both parties and the Republican machine following said to operate in both. In 1920 the Republicans polled approximately 24,000 votes and the Democrats 3,000.

The league ticket was not completed until this morning and will not be made public until the mass meeting tonight in the Webster Groves Armory, two blocks north of Lockwood avenue, Webster Groves. It was said previous to this morning's conference, however, that Preiss and probably Benson and Willecken will stay on the ticket. Circuit Judge McElhinney and Wurdeman, Republicans; Edward Tiffin, for County Clerk; Adam Henry Jones for Prosecuting Attorney; and Mrs. E. T. Smith for State Representative from the Second County District, all Democratic nominees, are assured of places on the ticket, as is Preiss.

An injunction granted yesterday by Circuit Judge McElhinney against the placing of two anti-fusion men on the Democratic ticket by the five anti-fusion members of the Central Committee leaves the way still open for a fusion, but members of both committees consider fusion improbable.

The league is making every effort to get the greatest possible number of voters to attend the mass meeting tonight especially those who did not vote in the primary, as its candidates must be nominated by petitions signed by 270 voters who did not vote in the primary. These petitions have been drawn up and are ready for signing tonight. Any attempt by the machine to stampede the meeting, it is said, has been prepared for by a large number of husky sergeants-at-arms.

No previous experience is necessary.

The Certo Short Process is simple, quick and sure. You can transform a bottle of grape or other fruit juice into perfect jelly in 10 minutes. Only one minute's boiling required.

COMMITTEE DEFERS CONSIDERATION OF DAUGHERTY CHARGE

Hearing of Keller's Action for Impeachment of Attorney-General Is Postponed Till December.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—By a vote of eight to three, the House Judiciary Committee, at a hastily called meeting yesterday, postponed consideration of the Keller impeachment charges against Attorney-General Daugherty—set for today—until the short session of Congress, beginning in December.

Decision to defer action virtually was reached at an earlier conference of Republican members of the committee at which it was contended that the hearing should not proceed while Daugherty was in Chicago in connection with injunction proceedings against striking railway employees; the basis for the impeachment charges.

Keller Calls It "Unfair." Action by the committee, with Democrats voting in opposition was taken a short time after Representative Keller, Republican, Minnesota, who had sought impeachment had announced that Samuel Untermyer of New York would represent him before the committee. Keller characterized the delay by the committee as "unfair" and later made public a letter from Untermyer which he had planned to present at the meeting today.

The New York attorney declared that if he could be of service in bringing to the attention of the committee "this scandalous situation," with respect to antitrust prosecutions, he would be glad to do so, "as a public service," without pay. As to the charges growing out of the injunction proceedings, Untermyer said acceptance of service as an attorney would depend on whether Keller could submit evidence to substantiate his charge of improper conduct in office.

Touching on the injunction proceedings at Chicago, Untermyer said that in common "with almost every lawyer in the country, I stand simply aghast at the terms of the injunction order in this case."

Calls Injunction Illegal. "On its face," he said, "it seems to me in direct violation of the rule laid down by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in the West Virginia miners' case and by the United States Supreme Court in other cases."

"If I rightly understand the facts the act of Mr. Daugherty in taking that case before the Judge, who was recently appointed by him, was, to say the least, so indelicate that I believe it will meet with the severe censure of the bench and bar," he asserted, "and he regarded it as amazing that, having insisted only last Saturday that an adjournment until Thursday of this week would be unfair to Attorney-General Daugherty, between Saturday and Monday they (the committee) concluded it would be unfair to Attorney-General Daugherty if they did not postpone the hearing until December."

Denying the statement that he had a grievance against Daugherty, Keller said such charges were "obviously for the purpose of influencing public opinion in favor of the accused."

"The charges upon which the impeachment proceedings are based," he asserted, "are specific and of the gravest character that could be levied against a public official. They not only involve his integrity and fitness for the high position which one fills, but his misconduct, if proven, affects the everyday life of millions of our people and brings the entire administration of justice into disrepute."

"Effort to Discharge Duty." "The bringing of the proceedings and the request for a hearing by the committee is an effort to discharge a very solemn official duty in the form and manner pointed out by the Constitution and laws of our country."

Chairman Volstead, in explaining the action of the Judiciary Committee in putting the hearing over until December, declared Keller had refused to produce or submit evidence on Saturday that the Attorney-General should have the right to appear in his own behalf and that nothing was to be gained by a partial hearing on the eve of adjournment of Congress.

Decision to postpone hearings was denounced last night by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, as a partisan barrage against justice.

Such brazen effrontery is almost unbelievable," said Gompers. "By this decision the proper and lawful procedure is prevented and the citizenship is left without recourse for a long period of time."

"During that time those now accused may continue the practices for which their impeachment is sought. The action of the partisan majority is indefensible, outrageous and a direct affront to the citizenship and to all standards of justice, honesty, conscientiousness and integrity. I find it difficult to adequately express the resentment which I am sure is shared by all who believe in justice. The American Federation of Labor, for its part, is ready to present evidence. If the charges against the Attorney-General are valid—and I am convinced they are—then the country must be helpless until December. The accused official may at least until then continue to jeopardize the rights of our citizens, flout the Constitution and violate the law of the land. The plans of the American Federation of Labor for a national demonstration for prosecution of the impeachment proceedings, through mass meetings in all cities, will proceed if anything with greater vigor.

SURVEY OF INDUSTRIES FOR GOVERNMENT

M. E. Singleton Named District
Ordnance Officer for Peace-
Time "Mobilization."

Announcement of the appointment of M. E. Singleton, president of the Missouri State Life Insurance Co., as chief of the Federal District Ordnance Office, in charge of a peace time survey to find where the Government in an emergency can get what it wants when it wants it, is contained in the following statement given out today by the Ordnance Office:

"M. E. Singleton has been appointed District Chief of the St. Louis District Ordnance Office in connection with the industrial mobilization during peace time. The primary object is to make an industrial survey so that in the event of a major emergency procurement of essential items of Ordnance material can proceed in an economical and intelligent manner and with the least practicable delay. Past experience has shown that the lack of such information was in a great measure responsible for delayed production, as well as increased cost for same. This does not mean that any emergency is imminent or expected, but is a policy that has been arrived at after a great deal of mature thought and deliberation. It is a well known fact that all commercial firms keep in touch with the industrial situation so that supplies and materials, when needed, can be advantageously procured."

"Singleton was District Chief of the St. Louis office during the World War and accepted reappointment upon the solicitation of General Williams, Chief of Ordnance. The appointment carries with it the nominal salary of one dollar per year and Mr. Singleton has provided office space for the St. Louis office without cost to the Government."

"An office has been established in the Missouri State Life Insurance Building, with Capt. Guy R. Hartwick, Ordnance Department, U. S. A., on duty as executive assistant to the District Chief."

"Every effort will be made to get in touch with all manufacturing and commercial firms in connection with this work, either in person or by letter. This work is of vital importance to all of us as citizens of the United States, whether employer or employee. Additional information will be gladly furnished upon inquiry to the St. Louis District Ordnance Office, room 415, Missouri State Life Building, Fifteenth and Locust streets, St. Louis, Mo."

TWO LEADING WEST PLAINS BANKS IN $1,000,000 MERGER

Deal Said to Be Largest Financial Transaction in Southern Missouri in Many Years.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
WEST PLAINS, Mo., Sept. 19.—An agreement was reached here yesterday for the consolidation of the First National Bank and the Howell County Bank, two of the leading financial institutions of West Plains and the merger, which is the largest financial deal made in this part of the State in many years, will be completed as soon as it is approved by the State Commissioner of Finance.

Dr. H. T. Smith, Lee M. Catron, and C. C. Chandler, the president, cashier and assistant cashier, respectively, of the First National Bank, will retire, and the officers of the Howell County Bank, headed by James P. Harlin, former Mayor of West Plains, and his brother, W. T. Harlin, will retain their holdings and positions.

The consolidated bank will retain the name of the First National Bank and will be housed in the new $20,000 building recently erected by the First National Bank.

John R. Reed, president of the Reed-Harlin Grocer Co. of West Plains, and B. Frank Woods of the Reed-Harlin company will come into the bank with the merger as heavy stockholders and as officers.

The combined resources of the two banks amounts to close to $1,000,000, and the merger gives West Plains one of the strongest banking institutions in Southern Missouri.

The First National Bank was organized in 1893 and the Howell County Bank in 1890. The Harlin brothers for more than 30 years have owned the Bank of Gainesville, at Gainesville, county seat of Ozark County, and also large shares in the Dora Bank, at Dora, Ozark County; in the State Bank of Bakersfield, Ozark County, and in the Bank of Thomasville, at Thomasville, in Oregon County.

Looks Like the Browns' Board of Strategy Cracked Under the Strain in the Ninth Yanks Overcome Lead In Last Two Innings; Browns Lucky to Score

Both St. Louis Runs Built on Doubles Into Overflow Crowd—Clean Fielding Would Have Given Davis 2—0 Victory—New York's Lead Increased to 1-2 Games.

By J. Roy Stockton.

How did the Browns come to lose that game? Was it poor hitting, poor fielding or did somebody blunder? Was it wise to put the burden on the shoulders of the slender Hubert Prueitt? Should Davis have remained, or should Shocker have gone in earlier, or Vangilder?

All St. Louis is mourning and nilling over these questions today. For the pennant chances of the Browns are so slim now that it is felt that the chance for a world series was cast away yesterday afternoon when the Yankees, trailing, two runs to one, jockeyed their way to a victory, 3 to 2.

Here was the situation, as it developed: Dixie Davis held the Yankees to two scratch hits in seven innings. Then in the eighth Joe Dugan doubled to right center with one out. Davis slipped over a third strike on Babe Ruth and then Pipp scratched a single off Davis' glove, sending Dugan to third, and when McManus recovered the ball and threw past Slater, Dugan scored, and Pipp went to second.

Davis ended the inning by putting over a third strike on Menzel. That indicated that Davis was as strong as when he started.

Another Scratch Single. But to start the ninth Schang duplicated Pipp's eighth-inning safety, his line drive bounding off Davis' glove for a single. Huggins sent in the dangerous Elmer Smith to bat for Ward and when Davis' first pitch to the slugger got away from Severeid, permitting Schang to take a second, Manager Lee Fohl halted the game for a conference. Davis wanted to remain, apparently, but in a few moments Hubert Prueitt, hero of Sunday's victory, came through the dugout and trudged to the hill.

Now perhaps it was wise to remove Davis. There was a man on second, with none out, and a dangerous left-handed hitter at bat. But was it wise to send in Prueitt? That was the second guesser had his chance. Prueitt, they agreed, afterward, was tired, his arm stiff from his long game of Sunday. With his arm stiff it was not expected that he would be wild, if not ineffective. Remove Davis, yes, but send in Shocker or Vangilder. If not Shocker or Vangilder, let Davis finish what he had started so well.

At any rate when Prueitt relieved Davis, Huggins substituted Mike McNally for Smith and McNally bunted. The ball fell in front of the plate and Severeid could have retrieved Schang to take a perfect throw. But the throw was low and wide and Foster had to leave the bag to prevent the ball from skidding to the grand stand. That put a man in first, a man on third and none out.

Why Did Prueitt Remain? Still Prueitt had pitched himself out of position as precarious as this and so he remained. But when he pitched four balls to Scott, thereby filling the bases, Fohl decided Prueitt could not be a hero two days in a row.

With the bases filled and none out, then, Shocker was called forth to take up the burden. The infield played in a bit and Shocker put all he had into his pitching. Huggins permitted Joe Bush to bat and Bush's grounder to McManus resulted in the first out of the inning. McManus' throw to Severeid forcing Schang at the plate.

This brought up White Witt with the bases still filled. Again the infield played in. It was not going to

Sisler's Batting Streak Ended; Bush Scores His 25th Victory

George Sisler's batting streak was ended yesterday when Joe Bush, in scoring his twenty-fifth victory of the season, turned back George four times. George, who had hit safely in 41 consecutive games, did not get the ball out of the infield against Bush. He grounded to the second baseman twice, once to the shortstop and fouled to Dugan once.

Miller Huggins engaged Umpire Evans in a long argument after Jacobson had pushed his way into the crowd in right center in the fourth inning to capture Pipp's line drive. The Yankee manager apparently thought there ought to be a ground rule providing for two bases on flies caught under certain circumstances.

Babe Ruth might have been put out the game in the eighth inning. After Umpire Guthrie had called a third strike on him the Bambino sneered and laughed and then threw his bat high into the air. Picking it up he gave it another flip into the air, veiling his disgust. But Guthrie, Evans and Dinnien suddenly found interesting scenery in the outfield and Babe's display of childish temper went unnoticed. Just as well. A child should not be spanked every time it misbehaves.

Witt certainly had his revenge. He made three hits against the Browns yesterday and his third drove in the two runs that gave the New Yorkers victory in the ninth.

Johnston and Tilden to Tour

Tennis Champion Announces

Plan to Invaade Europe

in 1924.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19.—William T. Tilden II, national tennis champion, and William M. Johnston, San Francisco runner-up in this year's national singles championship, plan to invade Europe in 1924, according to the champion.

"Unless something arises I have no doubt that I do not expect to go abroad next summer," said Tilden today. "But I do expect to go in 1924, and I think Johnston will go with me."

Tilden said he talked it over with Johnston and he seemed to think that two years hence would be a good time to make the trip. The champion said if the trip is made they would play in singles and pair up in doubles.

Indians Get Sherry Smith.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Sherry Smith, the big southpaw, pitched his last game for the Brooklyn Robins on Sunday. This became known yesterday when Charles Ebbetts, president of the Brooklyn club, announced that the Cleveland Indians had claimed the southpaw after all of the clubs in the National League had waived on him. Smith, since 1914, and who closed the 1922 season with his team in second place last night, had been of little use to the team and this season started to pitch underhand. He met with no success.

Baby Doll Did Not "Quit."

Among the plays discussed in the numerous post-mortems after yesterday's game was the final one in the Browns' half of the ninth when "Baby Doll" Jacobson failed to run more than half way to first on his roller to Scott. Jacobson stopped and watched Scott throw him out. Had Pipp dropped the ball, he could have recovered in time to make the out.

Jacobson's explanation of the play could not be obtained, but Johnny Tobin said that the center fielder had wrenched his knee fielding Witt's single and had further strained it batting.

Browns' Manager Also Declares Strategy Would Have Won Out Had Not Trap to Pinch Schang Off Third on a Sacrifice Gone Astray, Due to Severeid's Throw.

The removal of "Dixie" Davis in the ninth inning of the final game of the series with New York yesterday, and the eventual loss of the game by the Browns, was the foremost topic of discussion among baseball fans today. The wisdom of taking Davis out after his having pitched such a remarkable game was freely questioned. Lee Fohl's explanation of why he removed Davis follows:

"When a passed ball put Schang on second, with no outs, and Elmer Smith, a good left-hand hitter, a right-hand pitcher, should be relieved. Smith is a dangerous hitter; more dangerous than any other pinch hitter New York has. I wanted Smith out of there and I knew if I switched to Prueitt he would be replaced.

"Smith was taken out and then McNally replaced him. McNally was not up there to prevent a sacrifice. Our play was to catch Schang at third. McNally bunted, and if Hank Severeid had handled his bunt as Hank handles 99 out of 100, Schang would have been out at third, and I believe we would have been out of the hole.

"Had Schang been caught at third, it would have left a man on first base with one out and Scott and Bush coming up. Either Prueitt or Shocker would have cleaned that situation up in a hurry, I believe. But my principal object in sending Prueitt in at the time I did was to get Elmer Smith out of there. I was just an unfortunate break that it did not work out.

"The Browns feel the sting of that defeat, of course. But we are not out of the pennant race. We still have a chance and we'll be in there fighting today and tomorrow and for the rest of the season. New York cannot afford to take a lead today. They were lucky to leave St. Louis in first place."

ALLUMERE TO BE USED FOR BREEDING PURPOSES, OWNER KILMER SAYS

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Willie Sharpe Kilmer, who returned here yesterday after seeing his good filly, Sally's Alley, win the Futurity at Belmont Park last Saturday, has decided to give Allumere, the sire of the winner, every possible chance at his breeding farm near this city.

In discussing this stallion, which he regained from the Federal Remount Service, after letting him slip out of his hands for $375, Kilmer said:

"On breeding performances and individuality Allumere has every requisite for a great sire.

"To study the pedigree of Allumere is to review the history of the classic stakes winners of the English turf. Allumere is the best-bred son of Medford, who has 12 Derby winners. St. Leger winners and five Oaks winners on his sire's side. He also has 29 Derby winners and St. Leger winners on his dam's side, while 22 Derby and 11 St. Leger winners are directly represented in his pedigree.

"Donovan, the sire of Allumere's winners and at 2 and 3 years old won 155,000."

ABBOTT WILL RESIGN AS MEMPHIS MANAGER

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 19.—Sprenger Abbott, who last year piloted the Memphis club of the Southern Association, today announced that he would resign his position as manager of the club.

Abbott, who closed the 1922 season with his team in second place last night, had been of little use to the team and this season started to pitch underhand. He met with no success.

Ruth Thinks Fohl Made Mistake in Taking Out Davis

Babe Declares He Made Another When He Used Prueitt Ahead of Shocker.

By Babe Ruth.

(Copyright, 1922.)

Today was the end of the world for a lot of St. Louis fans. The experts said that the "little world's series" goes so will the pennant go; and yesterday the Yankees won the rubber game of their all important three-day battle with the Browns.

After trailing in the score through the first seven innings we finally found the range and crashed through the deliveries of Frank "Dixie" Davis, Hubert "Shucks" Prueitt and Urban Shocker to a 3-2 decision.

Yesterday's defeat was a crushing blow to the Browns and I seriously doubt if they will be anything like effective through the little that remains of the season.

Going into the eighth inning yesterday the Browns had the world in the hollow of their hands. They were leading 2 to 0 and the Yankees had made only two hits to work out of field scratches—off Dixie Davis, the crowd considered the game and the pennant "in," and the Browns themselves felt that they had hurdled the last formidable obstacle in their path.

Joe Dugan's double, Pipp's infield hit and a wild throw by McManus gave us one run in the eighth, however, and Schang opened the ninth with another infield hit. This brought Aaron Ward to bat, but Manager Miller Huggins sent Elmer Smith, a left handed hitter, to the plate instead. The first ball pitched to Smith got away from Catcher Severeid for a passed ball and Schang went to second.

Ruth Blames Fohl.

Then came the "break" that decided the game in our favor. Instead of allowing Davis to work out his own salvation, Manager Lee Fohl of the Browns sent Prueitt, a little left hander, to his relief. Huggins countered this move by calling Smith back to the bench and sending Mike McNally to the plate with orders to sacrifice.

McNally laid down a bunt. Severeid threw wild past third and the Yanks, needing only one run to tie, had runners on first and third with none out. Prueitt then stepped in to bat. Prueitt bunted and the bases were passing Deacon Scott and in turn replaced on the hill by Urban Shocker. If Fohl had any intention of using Shocker in this game he should have sent him in when Davis was withdrawn. In my opinion Fohl made one mistake in pulling Davis, and another when he sent Prueitt instead of Shocker to his relief.

With Smith to center, after Bush had batted into a force out at first,

Browns Must Face Better Pitching in Remaining Games

Tanks to Oppose Real Hurling Only in Series With Detroit Tigers.

FOHLES STILL HAVE HOPE

Loss, 1 1/2 Games Behind, Can Win Flag if New York Has Bad Fortune.

By Herman Weckle.

While the Browns are one and one-half games removed from first place, they can still win the pennant. They will have nine contests to play—three each with the Nationals, Athletics and White Sox. Meanwhile, the Yankees are playing the Tigers, Indians, Red Sox and Nationals. Three games are booked with each of the first three clubs and only one with Washington.

This schedule seems to favor the Browns, inasmuch as they are playing the Athletics and Nationals, two of the best clubs, while the Tigers and Indians are battling the Yankees. The Browns have the edge on both of their opponents in coming games, while Ty Cobb's men have downed the New Yorkers in 11 of 19 conflicts. Then the Red Sox, in last place, also have the edge on the Yankees for the campaign, while the Browns are ahead of the White Sox.

But there is still another way to look at it, and that is concerning pitchers to be faced by the two flag rivals in the Ben Johnson circuit. The Nationals are sixth at present, but this team totals around three real pitchers, which will be called upon to face the Yankees. The slugging Fohles probably will be called upon to face the Yankees, while the Browns will have to face the Yankees, George Moscone and Zachary. The latter two are left-handers of no mean ability.

Yanks Face Good Pitching. Meanwhile the Yankees will be facing Herman Pilleto, who has had more than his share of success against the Yankees this season. "Red" O'Dham and either Ethnik, Johnson or Datus. Each one of these quints will give any club a fight. Then the Browns get the Athletics. It is certain that one of the hill artists who will have to face will be Ed Rommel, the knuckle-ball expert, who yesterday put over his twenty-sixth victory of the season and leads the "hurlers" of both leagues. Then Mack has Bryan Harp and Bob Hasty to shoot at the St. Louisans.

While this is going on, the Yanks will be playing the Indians, the regulars of a world's championship club of two years ago. The Tribe has not been doing much and for the past three weeks has been working along minus Coveleskie and the two main cogs of the pitching staff.

If these two men are ready, the Yanks will have a real fight. Otherwise Speaker will be hard put, with George Uhle as his one best bet and several rookies to fall back on.

Hard Slugging Here. And then comes the Browns' final set of battles of the year, with the White Sox. Here we have Urban Packer as "good" a right-hander as there is in the league, and Robertson and Leverette or Blankenship, likely regarded youngsters. The Yankees will be mauling the "Yankee Farm" Boston.

Browns' Board of Strategy Convened Before Benching Dixie Davis

—By a Staff Photographer.

Hugh Duffy has "Rip" Collins, Jack Quinn, Herb Pennock and several lesser lights to throw at Huggins' men. They have had more than passing success against the leaders this season and maybe they will be able to repeat.

In the one game with Washington, which will close the campaign for the Yanks, they will face either of the three pitchers picked to work against the Browns.

From this it would seem that the Browns will face better pitching than the Yankees will be called upon to bat against in the remaining games.

But where there is life there is hope and the Browns are very much in the race, until they are finally counted out.

When Malone's left eye became swollen in the twelfth, he protested that something had been placed in Downey's gloves. The bout was halted and after an examination the boxers were ordered to proceed.

According to a number of persons at the ringside, Downey's chest was bathed with liquid, some of which is said to be in the hands of a member of the Boxing Commission.

Jimmy Dunn, manager of Downey, refused to comment on the affair.

According to sports writers, Malone had the best of eight rounds. Downey had the edge in three and one was even.

LOCAL BASEBALL FANS

KNOW ALL ABOUT THIS

An interesting study in shortstops was offered at Forbes Field with Toporcer, the hard-trying but inexperienced, young man at short for the Cardinals, and the equally energetic, but more experienced, far more brilliant Maranville at the difficult post for the Pirates, writes Harvey Boyle in the Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

Toporcer cannot be blamed with reason, of course, for causing havoc in the Cardinal defense because he was plainly doing his best, but how a shortstop unequal to making the plays he is called upon to tackle during the course of every game can gum up the works and how a shortstop, capable of taking care of his position can help his team was seldom better shown.

Toporcer's work recalled the days when the Pirates were floundering around with a Caton trying to do the job with anything but good results. With Lavan laid up and with the necessity of calling upon Toporcer to try the difficult role it is not hard to see at least one reason why the Cardinals are out of the pennant hunt with a good-sized chance of dropping out of the money division altogether.

The contrast in Maranville's and Toporcer's play again called to mind what a stellar little performer the great Rabbit is. Not only is his mechanical performance close to perfection, but his thinking apparatus in the field is in high gear continually, and at the plate his smartness is continually being demonstrated.

Imagine what a change in the fortunes of both teams would come if Rabbit happened to be placed in a Red Bird uniform and Toporcer in a Pirate uniform. Hornsby and Stocks avail little with the shortstop machinery knocking and our Schmidt, Carey, Bigbee, Coopers and Russell would not be able to check the enemy if plays were gummed up continually around the pivotal point at short.

$65,000 Receipts At Yankee Series

Paid Attendance Daily Slightly Under 25,000 for Each of Three Days.

Figures based upon an estimate submitted by club officials indicate that over $65,000 was paid at the game by fans who attended the three games between the New York Yankees and the Browns.

The overflow crowd which attended the first game was said by Willis Johnson, secretary of the Browns, to be a crowd in excess of 25,000, of which 24,750 paid the admission fee.

The crowd of Sunday exceeded that of Saturday and slightly more than 25,000 paid.

Yesterday's paid attendance equaled that of Sunday and it is estimated that 25,000 paid.

The paid attendance for the three games aggregated 74,000, according to unofficial estimates. The St. Louis American League Club has not issued an official statement regarding the attendance.

As on the first two days of the series, the crowd in Sportsman's Park yesterday filled the grand stand, pavilions and bleachers and completely encircled the outfield, to a depth of 10 or 12 persons. It began to congregate at 7 a. m. and at noon, when the gates were thrown open, the number of persons in the lines was sufficient to immediately preempt the 2600 seats in the upper tier of the grand stand and to more than half-fill the Slater side pavilion. One hour before game time the only unoccupied portion of the seating and standing space was the reserved seat section.

"Ifs" on A. L. Pennant Race

If the Browns win their remaining nine games, they will finish with 96-58, and in order to tie this New York will have to play at an 800 pace, winning 8 of 10. That's faster than either club has traveled all year.

If the Browns win eight of nine and finish with 95-59, New York will have to win 7 of 10, a percentage of .700, to tie.

If New York wins six of its remaining 10, the Browns will have to travel at 7-2 to tie. This would give the clubs a 94-60 mark at the end of the campaign.

If New York breaks even for rest of year to finish with 92-61, Browns will have to win two-thirds of battles or 6-3 to tie.

If New York should fall under 500 and win only four of 10, Browns, to tie at 92-62, will have to win five, while losing four.

Sisler Out of Series With Senators; Collins Will Play First Base

D. R. ROBERT HYLAND, who is attending George Sisler, said today that he had ordered the Browns' first baseman to stay out of the series with Washington, which opens today. He said that Sisler's deltoid muscle injury was of a nature which admitted of complications and that it was imperative that Sisler stay out of the series with Washington.

This means that Pat Collins, second-string catcher, will be back at first base today. "I believe it would be to Sisler's best interest to get out of the game for the rest of the season; but it is almost futile to order him to do that. However, I have presented the case to him and he has agreed to stay out of this series."

Tait-Moran Bout Called Off.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The crowd was so small at the New York Velodrome last night to see Charlie Tait, the Canadian lightweight, and Pat Moran of New Orleans in action that the bout was postponed. The boxing fans who did brave the shivery evening protested mildly at first, but finally lined up and got their money back.

EL PRODUCTO

WHEN we started making El Producto there were plenty of good cigar brands on the market. We knew "just another brand," however good, could never make more than a moderate success.

We determined that "El Producto" must be more than a brand name. It must stand for both a promise and a guarantee of greater cigar enjoyment.

The first step was to originate a new and distinctive blend that should be El Producto's own and could not be copied.

The next step was to provide this blend in a wide range of sizes so as to meet every smoker's particular preference as to shape and size.

The first El Producto was made not so many years ago. Today it is the fastest selling high grade cigar in America. El Producto has established a remarkable standard of quality—and it is a standard which will never be lowered.

CHAPTER XXV.

A HOLIDAY.
WHEN he had climbed up to his small room, already possessed through its one narrow window by sunrise, Q did not carry himself like a conqueror. He looked, rather, like a victim of the melee, white and grim, with a set mouth and painted eyes. He dropped down on the cot, too tired to think, and told himself that he had won his girl. Before he had time to analyze his emotions, a business for which he had summoned a sleep of entire exhaustion, another out even the first tremble of a thought. Only just as he lost himself, the linked hands of the conscious and the unconscious unwillingly disengaged, he endured a strange experience. From the summit of attained desire, he dropped into a terrible abyss of failure and of loss. He knew that Heloise loved him—she had told him that she would give him anything, everything he wished, and she knew his wishes well—but in the knowledge there was only a bitter desolation, as if to blackness in his hands. So dark and terrible was the sensation that had been less exhausted, it must have driven him to the rescue of full consciousness; but, before he could struggle away, Heloise overtook him and he slept profoundly.

At noon, bathed, brushed and faultlessly attired, he presented himself at Mary Grimscomb's door. It was open, and at the sound of his step she came quickly out as though she had been expecting him. In a dress of soft mauve petals, she looked like a small white rose, a dainty, dewy, rain-beaten rose. Her face had thinned, and this accentuated the beauty of her Irish eyes and left her sensitive mouth almost too expressive. She took him by both hands and looked up at him. "You foolish Q—you've worried me dreadfully! What made you go away? I want that story of yours badly—you didn't imagine I thought Dr. Sales had the right of it? But, seeing the hawk glitter to his eyes and the sharp triumph that lay along his lips, she changed her expression swiftly.

"What happened, Q?"
"I've got my hands whiskered, and she clutched his hands tight before she dropped them."

"Come in. Tell me. You are wonderful!"
She seated herself with an unconscious air of staidness in her schoolmarm's place, her ruffled daintiness spreading out about her, her small hands folded together on the table. She gazed up at him, very steadily under the arched eyebrows and up-curled lashes. He stood opposite her, turning his soft hat in his hand and looking slowly and wistfully about the room.

"It wasn't my education that won her for me, Miss Mary," he drawled; she could not fail to discern his bitterness; "it was my fists." He looked down at his hands and she, instinctively looking at them too, saw torn knuckles and bruised fingers. "I reckon the moon has got to be snatched at, Miss Mary, rather than prayed to."

He smiled and dropped into his place, putting out one of the strong and shapely damaged hands across the table toward her. His face threw off its new mask of victory, and sweetened—color rushing into its tamed pallor.

"Yes, ma'am, and Sophie's got her Laurie-boy. I've done pretty near everything I set out to do, and I'm plumb near to being satisfied with myself."

"You look," Mary shrewdly observed, "very much farther from assured than I've ever seen you look. Q, please tell me the story of your methods with the 'Sophie' girl." He did, gently and patiently, not letting her startle. "Old" disturbed his drawing, half-ironic description of the tosy-turvy melodrama.

"And now I'm going to New York."

"What are you going to do in New York?" She sat back as though pain made her unable any longer to keep that dainty erectness of attitude. He flushed hot and high.

"First, I'm going to buy the finest, classiest ring you ever wish to see, and next I'm going to take your pack back to visit with a publisher."

She forgot one pain for another, shaking her head, patiently. "It's just, dear Q, come back with one of the horrid ships. We laugh, papa and I, but it does hurt. We need the money pretty badly—worse than I thought we did! That is—now it is even more a matter of pride to pay it back than we ever thought it would be."

"Oh," she broke out suddenly, "if I could only make a lot and a lot of money, if I could get away! Sometimes I feel that for one breath of free, fresh air I'd give my soul! Don't look at me that way," she laughed shakily, and dropped her eyes to her hand; "you have—such eyes!"

They brooded over her and through her. "I was thinking," he said slowly, "of free, fresh air," and his chest lifted on a struggling breath.

The tiny room contained their silence loyally. Its clock ticking the eternal consolation of going—going! The two great globes, terrestrial and celestial, gleamed like mysterious bubbles that could vanish at a pin prick into space. Mary at last struggled away from that silence, she went over to her desk, gathered together a vast mass of manuscript, put it into a clean brown envelope and brought it to Q. "There," she said, smiling, "take it and find out for yourself whether any publisher will ever read it through!"

"One is going to read it!" He rose and took the bundle. "I've got to get my train," he said soberly, touched his fingers and went out.

Another man would have written to his lady, or seen her, or sent her a message. Q used to enforced absence and unbridled calling up Heloise on the telephone. He had his own theory of how an accepted suitor should act; a part of this theory was that an engaged man should appear with a ring in his hand.

The clerk at Tiffany's began by being patient and ended by being enthusiastic. Q's head almost touching his over the counter, they examined jewel after jewel, discussed setting up setting. The final choice was a pearl like a full moon with an arrowy sparkle of sapphires and diamonds pointing about it.

"It looks," said Q meditatively, "like moonlight and starlight lay in the hollow of your hand, don't it?" And the clerk, being, like many other clerks, an imprisoned poet, forced himself to smile at the magnificent Westerner's poetry, though to do so he had to grimace slightly. Sentiment bends often over the Tiffany counters, the clerks are fairly accustomed to it, but it usually disguises itself decently in slang or banter.

Personal dignity, Q's poetry had stalked forth unashamed.

He had put his purchase carefully into an inner pocket, the same one that held the faded record of Miss Seld's passionate blunder, and then, knitting himself for battle, he sought out an address.

The atmosphere of a publishing house, still, spacious, leathery, chilled his nerves. He stood at a sort of barrier behind which gray, scholarly, old-young, youth-old people moved without haste on various dignified errands, and at last he attracted the attention of a bald-headed young scholar with horn-rimmed spectacles.

"Say," murmured Q huskily, "I want to see your boss."

The great goggles twinkled upon Mr. Mortimer.

"That's the boss. I reckon that would be Mr. Chiswick, wouldn't it?"

"He's the senior partner," smiled Goggles patiently. "Have you an appointment? Do you know him personally?"

"No, sir. But I've got to see him in one of them glass cages—where I've located his name."

"I believe he's busy. Let me have your card."

"That's something my education hasn't got round to yet. Let me write it down for you, stranger; it's a right tricky name."

He wrote it in pencil, and with it the frankly grinning Goggles departed in the direction of the glass cage. Q stood for 15 minutes and sat for 15 more. He looked at tables loaded with books and his heart sank. He felt for something heavy in his pocket. At last Goggles reappeared.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Kinwydden, but Mr. Chiswick is very much occupied this afternoon. Perhaps I could attend to your business."

"No, sir. I've got to see the boss."

"I'm very sorry."

"Don't waste your sorrow. I'm going to wait."

Goggles' smile vanished and seemed to be translated upward into a frown.

"It will be no use, Mr. Kinwydden. Mr. Chiswick is definitely engaged."

"When does your shop close?"

"Mr. Chiswick will be leaving at about 5:30 today."

Q looked at his watch.

"I'll wait," he said, and sat down to roll and light a cigarette. Goggles, sarcastic and temporarily baffled, withdrew behind tables to another glass cage, presumably his own. Q waited. A typist not far away smiled upon him and he dazzled her by his appreciative return. Another clerk presently inquired his business, made a tentative effort to win into Mr. Chiswick's sanctum, and came back to advise Mr. Kinwydden to write down his business. Q patiently repeated himself.

"I don't suffer any from waiting," he explained sweetly, and again the typist and he exchanged beautiful and more intimate smiles.

By the time the lights came on, Q had smoked his tenth cigarette and began to roll his eleventh. The typist suddenly and impulsively rose. She went over to Chiswick's door and knocked smartly. There was something chivalrous and dauntless in the carriage of her head. She remained for a long time in the cage; Q could see her shadow standing above some one and awaying eloquently. When she came out, she came swiftly on glad feet. They brought her through a gate to Q, who rose and stepped on his eleventh cigarette.

"Mr. Chiswick will see you," she said.

"Say," said Q, drawing a breath, "I met a woman I liked better at first sight!" And he followed her to the glass door.

Excelsior Springs Impression Is That Democratic Club Women Won't Support Reed in November

Marguerite Martyn Cites Significant Incidents to Prove Official Action as to Opposition to Senator Was Not Needed After Snubbing Big Male Convention.

By MARGUERITE MARTYN.

THE impression left upon the observer at the State conference of women's Democratic clubs at Excelsior Springs and the meetings there of the Women's Democratic State Committee, is that the women belonging to these organizations will not support Senator Reed in November.

No official action was taken, to be sure. The women do not want to risk the effect such action might have upon the rest of the Democratic ticket; though "any woman ought to be able to scratch her ticket intelligently," was an oft-repeated observation. Neither do the women care to incur the stigmatization of party bolters, though all declare there is no conflict with their consciences on that point, since Reed is not really a Democratic candidate.

The nearest approach to a definite assertion of policy toward the Senator's candidacy was that episode of peremptory adjournment in the midst of a busy session when one woman, whether innocently or as a misguided tool of the machine, ventured the suggestion that the Senator be asked to address the meeting. The vote for adjournment was 38 to 8. And some of those voting against adjournment were said to be opponents of the Senator.

Eighty-nine Democratic clubs with more than 24,000 members were enrolled at this first conference of the new organization. If the same proportion of Reed and anti-Reed sentiment holds good, there is quite a formidable array of opposition in itself.

Another reason for the avoidance of any official action against the Senator was that the inspiration such action would give the enemy to organize. Mrs. Halsey Wilson of New York, Democratic woman leader of the Bronx borough of that city, who conducted a public speakers' institute in connection with the women's meeting, expressed the opinion that the women could accomplish little in opposition to the candidate without thorough organization and a vigorous campaign; and such organization against any name on the Democratic national ticket, she deplored as contributing to the strength of the party now in power at Washington.

A woman recently widowed was a watcher at the polls on primaries day. Previously she had been inspecting gravestones in the town and mourning and mourning on his politics, not letting him remain in ignorance of her own views, either. As he and his wife emerged from the polling place, the widow quite casually asked who they had voted for. When they replied, self-righteously, "For Reed," the widow, who is a very dignified, impressive-looking woman in her handsome weeds, drew herself up in her most impressive manner and said:

"Those may be rather expensive votes for you. They may cost you about $500. I had intended to buy my husband's monument from you. Now I may, after the November election, buy it elsewhere."

It was pointed out many times in discussions of the tariff and other economic questions that women have the spending of about 90 per cent of all the family incomes as a reason for their interest in these public problems. I don't know whether any dark significance attaches to the number and repetition of this statement, but I was told of another method of controlling votes of which not a few women frankly are availing themselves.

"We have always traded at Blank & Co.'s, who have the largest, finest grocery market place in our town," said a prosperous-looking woman, mother of a large family and wife of one of the most prominent men in one of our larger towns out in the State. We knew that he was a Reed man. The morning after the election I told my daughter to cast about and see if there wasn't another market in town whose owner had voted for Long. Daughter found one and we immediately telephoned him our order for the day, telling him to charge it. The groceryman was almost overcome with surprise. "Aren't you making a mistake? This is So & So's, not Blank's, you are talking to." We told him we were not making a mistake, and we continued day after day to telephone him our order. After a few days a handsome basket of fruit, all decorated and fixed up with ribbons, arrived as a present from the new grocer.

"Of course we intend he shall know before the November election that it isn't in baskets of fruit he can show his appreciation of our patronage."

In Sweden it is a popular superstition that a girl must not look in a mirror after dark by the aid of an artificial light, under pain of losing all attraction for the opposite sex.

The Height of Folly.

NEVER see a human fly upon some steeple dancing, while far below spectators cry, "Oh, isn't he entrancing!" I never watch his thrilling feats, the somersaults and capers by which he earns his daily eats and figures in the papers, without this thought: If he should fall, though death's most melancholy there are but few would care at all, he courts his fate through folly. The tales of men who rocked the boat or raced the trains to crossings can bring no lump into my throat or keep me sleepless, tossing. No tears should fall for foolish runts who might be well and jolly, when they assist on stupid stunts that are the height of folly. But worse than chaps with loadless guns which end in their undoing, more witless than their simple sons on giant crackers chewing, is he who has some task ahead and fears to plunge into it; who howls aloud in heartfelt dread: "I know I cannot do it!" "I can't do this! I can't do that," some take it for their slogan; and this conviction floors them flat; it gets Smith, Brown or Hogan. A mortgage rests on Jimpon's place; says he: "Why plant a garden? I cannot run those weeds a race; I cannot make a far-den!" Why should we pity any chap with work who won't go to it; but gives himself this handicap: "I know I cannot do it." "I cannot eat," "I cannot sleep," "I cannot pay the hatter!" It makes the best of roads seem steep when traveled to this chatter. No doubt the human fly lacks brains; some day, too late, he'll rue it; but worst is he who still complains, "I know I cannot do it!"

After-Dinner Tricks

No. 231—Blowing the Card.

A CALLING card is bent as shown in the illustration, with two little flaps or "legs" at the ends. The spectators are challenged to blow the card over, as it sets on the table. The harder they blow, the more the card jumps about, but it will not turn over.

The trick, however, is possible, as the performer can demonstrate when called upon, and the secret of his success will not be obvious even after it is demonstrated. The trick is to blow sharply on the table some little distance away from the card, which should be edgeways to the performer. A distance of two feet is not too far, and when the wind coming up from beneath will turn the card over.

Fashion News Notes

PARIS.—A costume so quaint and old-fashioned as to make one exclaim in surprise put in appearance today among the autumn modes. It is a costume copied directly from the shakers, though by the time the Rue de la Paix is done with it this frock becomes a thing of distinct gaiety. The material is a printed silk in bright greens and henna. At the waist and hem it is bound with green, and green ribbons tie the wide white organdie cape collar in front. The bodice is snug, the skirt circular, the sleeves almost nonexistent. With this gown is worn a shaker bonnet of henna satin bound with green.

PARIS.—The bride of today wears a voluminous veil, which not only covers her gown almost wholly, but also trails many yards on the floor. The Russian coronet arrangement of the veil, so popular in the spring, has vanished. Instead the veil is fitted snugly to the head like a cap and held low over the forehead by a band of orange blossoms and petals just above the eyebrows.

LONDON.—In spite of a determined effort to bring black into fashion again, it seems likely today that browns, dull greens and blues will have chief place in color schemes for the fall. Black, however, is assured of a place among afternoon and evening costumes. It will not be the filmy black gown of a season ago, however. It will be a black gown daintily lifted to brilliance by a slash of flame or gold or a blazing bit of turquoise.

NEW YORK.—Black monkey fur is an effective trimming for the autumn coat frock. It gives it even more of a coat and frock appearance, a costume intended for the street yet elegant enough for indoor wear in the afternoon. One of the coat frocks of tan duvetyn seen today has a sparse fringe of black monkey fur around the collar and little tufts of the fur at intervals around the hem of the skirt.

NEW YORK.—Some of the new afternoon gowns worn on the avenue today have sleeves cut on the same pattern as those on a real Japanese kimono, except that—quixotically enough—they are not kimono sleeves. The Japanese lady has a square and very wide cuff at the end of her sleeve—it forms indeed, a pocket into which many accessories such as fan, handkerchief and purse may be thrust.

His Official Boss

By WINIFRED BLACK.

(Copyright, 1922.)
THERE he stood at the big luncheon the other day, the man of affairs, keen, practical, practical, and when he introduced the speaker of the day, he announced that he was introducing his official boss.

And the women in the crowded room smiled and applauded, and the "Official Boss" rose, cool, composed, charming, and made a very good speech, indeed, and we all congratulated her and ourselves, and everything was lovely.

But one of the women said to me on the way out:
"What a wonderful man John Williams is, to stand right up and admit that a woman is his superior officer—and he acted as if he were glad of it. Do you think he really was?"

A Matter of Training.
And I told the woman that I thought he really was, and that I didn't see anything so wonderful about it.

Of course, if he had been a little man he wouldn't have done it. I knew a man once who said he never felt as if he really knew another man until he heard what the other had to say about women and saw the way he acted toward children.

I wonder if it is hard for the average man to admit that "any woman on earth" can be as intelligent as he is.

Are women really more generous, broader-minded and less conceited than men, or have they just been trained by the centuries till they know how to pretend that they are? Have you never seen a clever, resolute, broad-minded, high-souled woman stooping and pretending to be lame so that she wouldn't embarrass her little stoop-shouldered, narrow-minded, stupid husband by looking taller and stronger than he?

Have you never observed a man doing the same thing—well, not exactly the same, but something a good deal like it? Don't you know a man somewhere who bears with his wife's ill-temper and her extravagance, and her petty vanity and her cold-blooded extortion, and pretends that he likes her—clear to the end of his days?

I do—I know a dozen such men. Of course, it is largely a matter of training—largely a matter of tradition. Nobody likes a woman who's always trying to assert herself. Nobody can bear a woman who won't try to shield her husband or her father or her brother from the consequences of her own short-sighted folly.

And the little man, the vain man, the man who isn't much of a success in his particular line does always seem to resent a woman who is not little and not vain and not a failure.

What Do You Think?
There's nothing strange about that. "In the country of the blind," they say, "the one-eyed man is king." No wonder the one-eyed man loves to have the blind surrounding him.

Clever men, successful men, real men of real affairs don't have to surround themselves with sycophants or with parasites or even with humble dependents, to feel at ease.

Andrew Carnegie told me once in an interview that he never saw a man yet as bright as the brightest woman he knew, and I saw Carnegie's stenographer wince and make a wry face when he took down the statement.

I'll warrant he's a stenographer—still.
No, I don't think it was wonderful for John T. Williams to stand up in a public gathering and announce, with a good-humored smile, that the woman speaker of the day was his "official boss."

I think it was clever of him and polite. And I think, also, that when he did it, he did what any broad-gauge man would have done, and what any little-minded, strutting popinjay of a nobody would have died rather than do.

What do you think about it?

NUT LOAF

ONE-HALF cup chopped nut meats.
2 cups sliced celery.
2 cups hot mashed potatoes.
2 tablespoons butter.
1 teaspoon grated onion.
1 teaspoon salt.
1 egg.

The celery should be cooked in boiling salted water for thirty minutes, then drained and added to other ingredients, including lightly beaten egg. Place in a greased loaf tin and bake for half an hour in a moderate oven. Use the liquor in which the celery has been cooked to make a flavored cream sauce poured over the loaf, or serve with tomato sauce if preferred.

LIFE IN A BIG TREE

By Wm. A. McKeever

DID some of our ancestors live in trees? To the one who takes time to make careful observation much evidence will be accumulated to support the theory of primitive man as having been a part-time tree dweller. Recently I ascended a ladder into the leafy section of a large walnut tree and there I found the "home" of five children, three boys and two girls, and with the following equipment:

A dining table and crude furnishings.
Five seats nicely cushioned in crochets of limbs.

A small box shelf of books.
A small cupboard filled with provisions.

An electric light working successfully from battery system.
A cleverly arranged drinking fountain with rubber tube attachments.

A cache of missiles for use against attacking enemy.
A sleeping hammock that looked precarious for the sleeper.

A small assortment of knives, pliers and similar implements.
A variety of bugles and noise-making instruments.

This arrangement is not unlike that found in the typical hidden cave rendezvous of boys except that it suggests a little less of the idea of ferocity or deviltry. Also, the tree house is more frequently shared by small girls than is the cave.

But the main purpose of this article is again to contend for the divine right of children to participate in the past experiences of the race; the right to make cave dens; the right to build lodges in trees; the right to hike through forests and hills; the right to swim and wade in streams. We must not only recognize this inherent right of the boys and girls, but we must enable them to make a constructive use of their predominant race-trailing instincts.

The boys who spend part time during the summer season inhabiting a "home" in a secluded cave are going to come out of the affair stronger and better—provided some one of responsible moral interest give the venture the right direction. It is certainly a splendid health tonic for a group of small boys and girls to have a furnished lodge in a big, spreading tree—provided again that some good adult act as sponsor for the affair.

So with the other "wild and savage" tendencies of the young. They often signify far more for substantial life training than do the cut-and-dried classroom lessons because of their extreme advantage of possession.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

By WANDA BARTON

"EVERYTHING ABOUT THE HOUSE HELPS TO MAKE THE HOME."

Are You Planning to Replenish Your Supply of Different Towels?

REPLENISHING the stock of family towels is a fall and spring duty in almost all households, and since linen has been scarce it has not been a very satisfactory undertaking. This fall, however, linens are coming in once more from European centers, and so the mercerized cotton fabrics and make-shift materials we have been using are less often a part of household supplies.

Huck toweling has long been the favorite of particular-housekeepers. Ready-made hemstitched towels with damask borders figure largely in purchases of household linen, though there are still some women old-fashioned enough to insist upon buying huck by the piece and making their own towels. There is an advantage in this, for they may be made longer and wider than those that come ready-made, and may be hemmed any width by hand and finished with drawn-work and initials, or embellished with quaint cross-stitch work.

Quest towels are made up in sets of a dozen, just enough for each week-end guest, and these towels are usually hemmed with narrow hems and embroidered with an initial in one corner. If they are used by the family, also, they are made to match the big towels.

Among the season's novelties are pink and blue linen towels with in-depth, hemstitched hems. The colors must be carefully set the first time the towels are used, but even with this precaution it is not at all certain that they will not fade. Many women buy them for distinctly bathroom use, and if they fade they have them boiled white.

Joseph's coat had nothing on the crash towels of today, for they are in all imaginable colors and combinations. Here, again, dyes are not guaranteed, and there is nothing as ugly as a faded towel. It is safer to stick to plain white ones with colored, striped borders. Salt should be put in the water to set colors when towels are washed for the first time. Blue or pink is safe, while lilac and green are apt to fade. Bath mats come in colors to match bath towels, and here, again, the same choice in colors holds good. Some women buy terry cloth or crash toweling and make towels just the length and width they like, in which case they buttonhole-stitch a narrow hem at the ends, then crochet on a narrow, scalloped edge. These towels are apt to be of a better quality than those ready-made, and so last longer. When towels begin to wear out they may be used up for floor cloths and make excellent ones. Wash cloths may be had in striped borderings like the big towels.

Hand roller towels are often used during the day in families where there are a number of youngsters. The toweling for this purpose comes in plaids or with white centers and wide-colored borders, which distinguishes them from kitchen towels.

Separate towels for children's use have a tape loop at one corner or stitched flat across one end by which to hang them up. Damask towels are not as popular as huck, for they are not as pliable and do not absorb water as well. Old-fashioned fringed towels are rarely used by modern housekeepers.

Kitchen linens were never more fascinating than they are today. Towels with their use typed in white letters on the colored borders are well liked. "Glass," "dish," "cook's" and "butler's" are the inscriptions which distinguish these towels, so that they may not get mixed. They come in solid or linen plaids, large, heavy, lined blocks, stripes of all widths and plain white with colored borders. Usually, different colors are chosen for each purpose in households where there are servants. Where the mistress does her own work with or without an occasional helper, one color is sufficient. Where towels are especially made, they may be embroidered with various symbols, such as cups and saucers on tea-towels, pots and pans on cook's towels, tumblers, plates and trays on butler's, and dishpans and platters on dish towels.

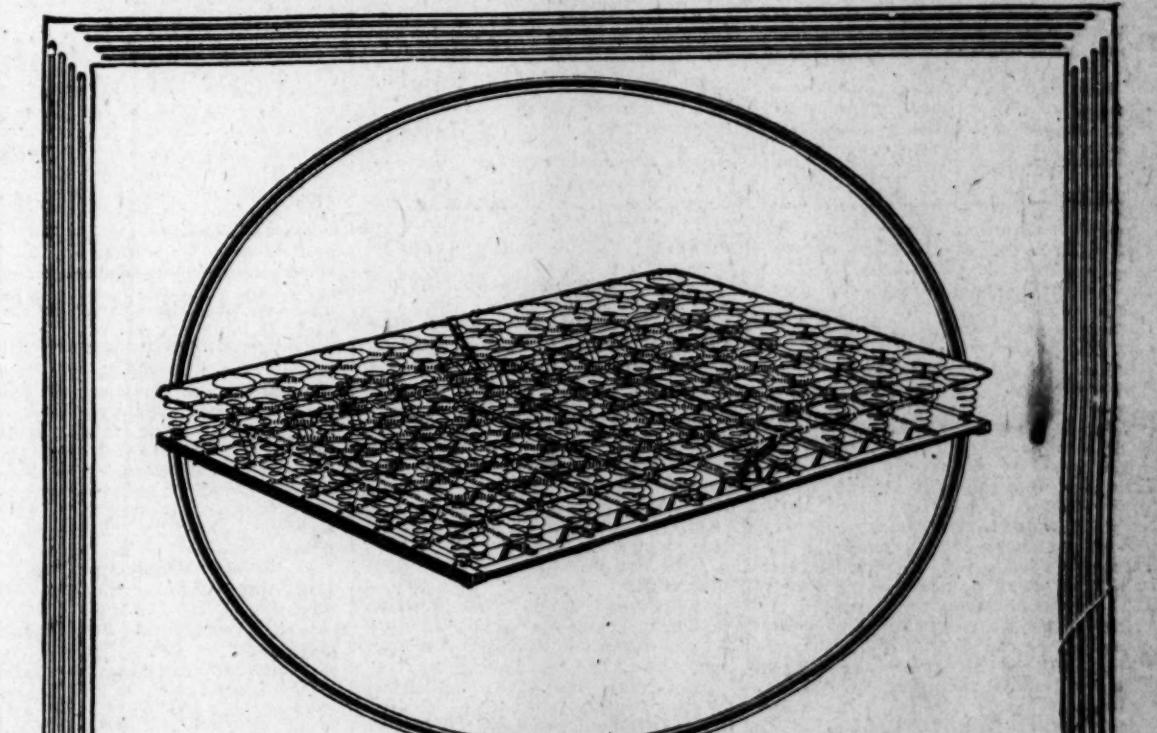

The wise housekeeper puts only a limited supply of towels in use at one time, as they must be kept clean and in order for daily use. If extra towels are at hand, they are apt to be used, while soiled ones wait for a more convenient season to be washed, or, as sometimes happens, are used for rags.

Capturing Sleep—on a hint from Science

People used to think of engineers simply as men who built bridges and railroads.

That they might make a big contribution to sleep was never thought of—until Simmons brought science to bed spring construction.

Two sciences, in fact. Starting first with the science of sleep. Nerve reactions. What happens to the body during sleep. The source and effects of nerve tension.

Then from there into practical engineering, producing the sleep equipment that relaxes the nerves and invites deep, sound sleep.

Some of the Reasons Why WISS Shears Cut Best and Wear Longest

Remember, a coat of shiny nickel plate may hide poor quality and many defects. It makes all scissors and shears look alike. What is under the nickel plate is what you want to know.

- Perfect Adjustment
By expert workmen longest service without frequent readjusting.
- Double Forged Blades
Crucible steel blades are welded to an unbreakable forged steel frame. This gives perfect cutting edges.
- Accurate Screws
Fixed as precisely as the screws in a watch, prevent WISS shears from working loose.
- Scientific Grounding
Edges are the heart of the shears—shears with soft edges are useless.
- Blades Scientifically Ground
uniformly through the entire length means blades that will cut clean.
- Thorough Inspection
Before leaving factory every pair is thoroughly tested, and this insures cutting satisfaction.

Who Makes Your Underwear and Hose

When you are in a Pullman or at the Country Club what a satisfaction it is to know that your underwear and hosiery measure up to your other wearing apparel.

Representative men are as keen for style and quality in their undergarments as in clothes, shirts and shoes.

So any lack of uniform standards in their Underwear and Hosiery must be the fault of the merchandise offered them in their dealer's stores.

This is probably a new thought to you—the establishing of a definite standard for both Underwear and Hosiery.

Standards of fit, wearing service, comfort, money's worth—and that trim style that is the prerogative of every man who knows how to wear his clothes. There is one concern that has done it. Its sign is the Master Brand of Allen A.

You find this Master Brand on the genuine Cooper's-Bennington Spring Needle Knit Underwear. For Men and Boys. All weights, for every season.

You find it also on genuine Black Cat Hosiery for Men, for Women, and for Children. In Silk, in Lisle, in Wool, in Cotton.

This Master Brand is the personal pledge of the makers of these two celebrated lines.

Wherever you find it, whenever you find it, it is your assurance of the highest attainable standards in Underwear or Hosiery, or both.

THE BATTLE OF SCHOOLBOYS.

WHEN Schoolboy Pruett took the hill determined on a great exploit, He found he'd have to hurl the pill Against the famous Schoolboy Hoyt. And it was up to Hoyt and Pruett To show their elders how to do it.

The Brownies couldn't get to Waite. The Yankees couldn't get to "Stucks." They put the ball across the plate And fooled the heavy-hitting ducks. It looked like there was nothing to it But Mr. Hoyt and Mr. Pruett.

As to and fro the battle raged. Terrible was the mental strain. No batting rallies had been staged. And neither side an inch could gain. For Hoyt was there to make 'em rue it. As was the young and gallant Pruett.

The fans were straining at the ropes. And madly cheering for the Browns. The while their cherished pennant hopes Were having many ups and downs. While Yankee batters gazed at Pruett And marveled at the way he threw it.

The Yanks had scored a single run. Which proved to be their only tally. And in the sixth the Brownie won. By putting on a batting rally. And in the end the Yankees blew it. Because they couldn't get to Pruett.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

OF all the horses that I know There's none like Sally's Alley. She has a silly name although The bidders round her rally. Full many a name originates In sundry racing stables. But "Sally's Alley" indicates A poverty of labels.

TOO TRUE.

When they have to resort to naming horses after streets and alleys It's time to page the guy that names the collars, sleeping cars and apartment houses and get a few ideas.

The man on the sand box says that some people seem to think that pop bottles are made to pop ball players on the head with.

Looks like the boy that struck "Whitey" Witt is destined to go down in history with the man that struck Billy Patterson.

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

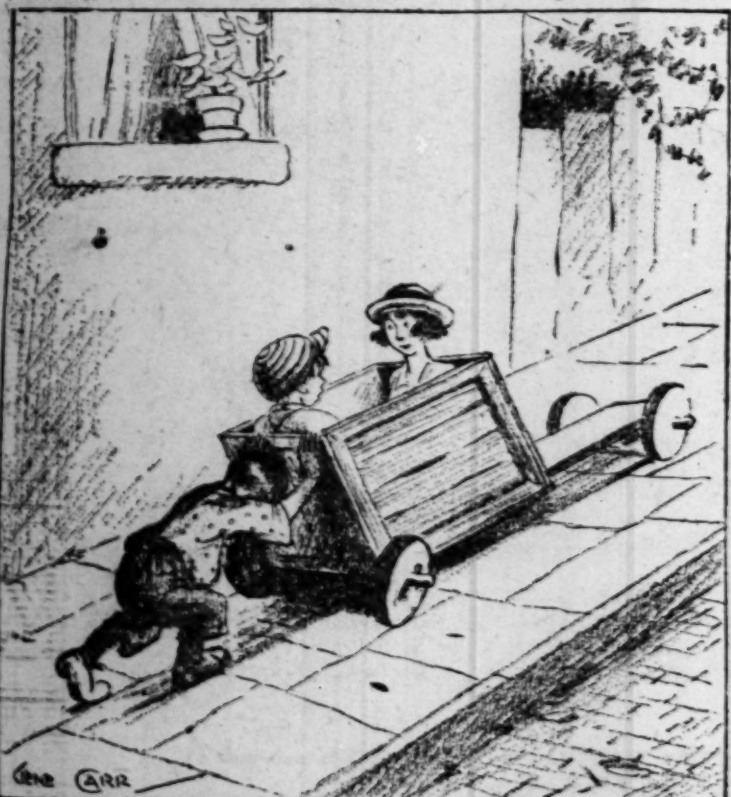

I MET a man upon the street And Legion was his name; He asked where he could get a seat To see the baseball game. I wrote said query on my slate As "Foolish Question 98."

QUITE SO.

Throwing baseball games is bad. But throwing pop bottles is worse.

Fortunately the Browns don't have to play any more games in New York until they meet the Giants in the W. S.

MY FAVORITE STORIES.

By IRVIN S. COBB.

BY WAY OF PROPER PREPARATION.

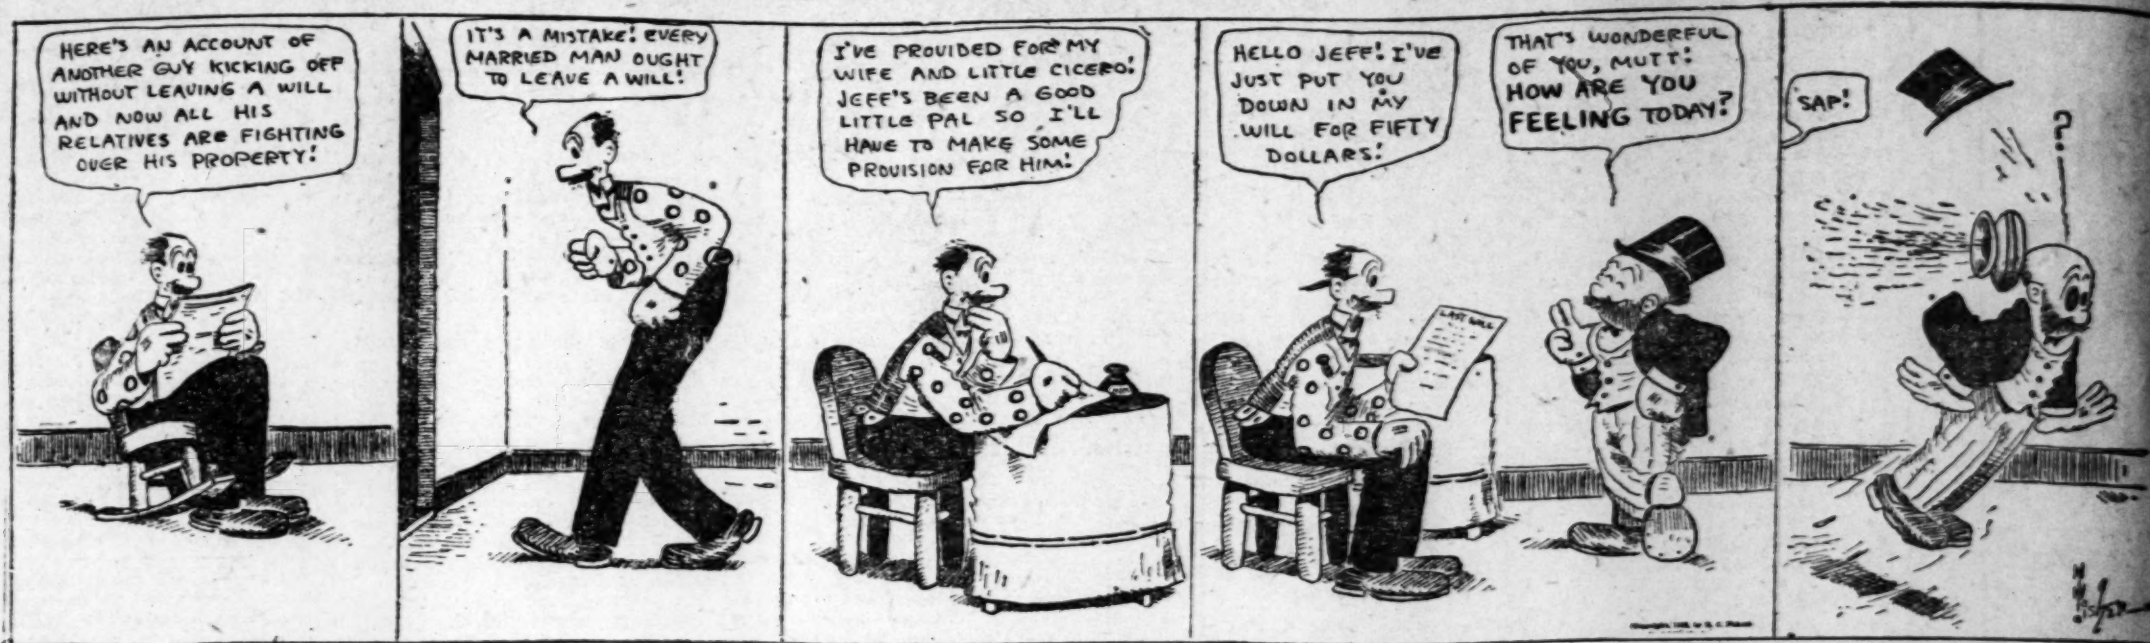

There is a Judge in a Massachusetts town who, behind a benignant exterior, hides an occasional surprise for persistent evildoers. Once there came up before him for sentence two youths who had been guilty of a long sequence of misdeeds. Both were under age, each having just passed his nineteenth birthday. Having been caught with the goods on them they had pleaded guilty, in the hope of getting off with a light punishment.

The Judge adjusted his glasses and through them beamed softly at the young lawbreakers.

"Now then, boys," he said softly, "I'm going to send you two to the State reformatory until you come of age"—his voice suddenly changed—"and while you're there you can both be studying for the State penitentiary."
